

THE ARGVMENT OF THE FIRST BOOKE

What times for goe Richard the seconds raigne:

The fatall causes of this civile warre

His Vnckles pride his greedse Minions gaine,

Glosters revolt, and death delivered are:

Herford ascused, exild, call dbacke againe,

Pretends ramend what others Rule did marre.

The King from Ireland hastes, but did no good,

Whilst strange prodigious signes foretoken bloud.

And bloudy factions of a mighty land:
Whose people hauty, proud with forain spoyles
Vpon themselves, turne back their conquering hand:
Whilst Kin their Kin, brother the brother soyles,
Like Ensignes all against like Ensignes band:
Bowes against bowes, the Crowne against the crowne,
whilst all pretending right, all right throwen downe.

B
What

2

What furie, ô what madnes held you so
Deare people to too prodigall of bloud?
To wast so much and warre without a soe,
Whilst France to see your spoyles, at pleasure stood;
How much might you have purchased with lesse wo?
Thave done you honor and your Nephewes good,
Yours might have beene what ever lies betweene
The Perenei and Alps, Aquitayne, and Rheine.

And yet ô God wee haue no cause to plaine
Since hereby came, the quiet calme we ioye
The blisse of thee Eliza, happie gaine
For all our losse; for that no other waye
The heauens could find, then vnite againe
The fatall seu'red families; that they Might bring forth thee; that in thy peace might grow
That glory which no age could euer show.

O facred Goddesse, I no muse but thee
Invoke in this great worke I now entend,
Do thou inspire my thoughts, insuse in mee
A power to bring the same to happie end:
Raise vp a worke for latter times to see
That may thy glorie and my paines commend:
Strengthen thy subject strang thinges to rehearse
And give peace to my life, life to my verse.

And

And thou Charles Mounting borne the worldes
That hast received into thy quiet shore (delight,
Me tempest-driven fortune-tossed wight,
Tir'd with expecting and could hope no more:
And cheerest on my better yeares to write
A sadder Subject then I tooke before,
Receive the worke I consecrate to thee
Borne of that rest which thou dost give to mee.

And Memorie, preseruresse of thinges done,
Come thou, vnfold the wounds, the wracke, the wast,
Reueale to me how all the strife begunne
Twixt Lancaster and Torke in ages past.
How causes, counsels and events did runne
So long as these vnhappie times did last,
Vnintermixt with sictions, fantasses;
I versisie the troth, not poetize.

And to the end we maie with better ease

Iudge the true progresse; here bigin to showe
What we are the times foregoing nere to the ase,
That these we maie with better profit knowe:
Tell how the world fell into this disease
And how so great distemperature did growe,
So shall we see by what degrees it came
How thinges grown full, do sone grow out of frame.

B 2.

Ten

Tenkings had now raignd of the Norman race With variable fortune turning chaunce, All in two hundreth fixtie one yeares space, When Edward third of name and first of Fraunce Possest the crowne in fortunes highest grace; And did to greatest state, his state aduaunce, When England might the largest limits see That ouer any king attaind but hee.

Formost of all the rest, toyld in vnrest What with wrong titles, what with inward broyl, Hardlie a true establishment possest Of what they fought with fuch exceeding toyle: "I For why their power within it self opprest, (while; Scarce could breake forth to greatnesal that Such wo the childhood of this state did passe Before it could attaine to what it wasse.

William querour.

Forfirst the Norman conquering all by might, the Con- By might was forft to keepe what hee had got: Altring the lawes, chaunging the forme of Right, And placing barbarous Customes he had brought: Maistring the mighty, humbling the poorer wight With grieuous taxes tyranie had fought, won Scarce laide thas ured groundes to build vpon The chaunge Cohatefull in fuch course begon woll william

Ten

William his sonne tracing the selfesame wayes The great outworne with war, or flaine in peace Onely vpon depressed weakenes prayes, And treades down what was likelieft to increase, Those that were left, being left to wofull daies, Had onely powre to with for fome release: whilst giving beastes what did to men pertaine Tooke for a beast himselse was after slaine.

Williams Rufus.

Henrie his brother raignes when he had donne (who Roberts title better to reiect) The Norman Duke the Conquerours first sonne, Those greeuances, his fatall race begunne Reformes the lawes which some he did neglect: Whose sons being drownd for who he did prepare Leaues crowne & strif to Mand his daughters care.

Whom Stephen his Nephew (fallifying his oath) Preuents; affailes the Realm; obtaines the crown: King Raifing fuch tumults as torment them both Whil'st both held nothing certainlie their owne. Th'afflicted Realme devided in their troth, And partiall faith; most miserable growne, Endures the while; till peace and Stephens death Conclude some hope, of quiet; to take breath.

Euen

B 3.

14

By mothers line) succeeds th' vnrightfull king

Henrie the second, in whose raigne reuiu'd

Th'oppressed state and first began to spring,

And ô if he had not beene too long liu'd

Thaue seene th'affliction that his age did bring

By his vngodly sonnes; then happie man,

For they against him warr'd, for whom hewan

All Jreland, Scorland, th'lles of Orcades,

Poytiers, Guienna, Brittany hee got,

And leades forth forrow from it selfe to thease,

Recouers strength at home so feeble brought:

Giues courage to the strong, to weaker ease;

Ads to the state what England neuer sought:

Who him succeed (the forraine bloud out growne)

Are home born kings by speech and birth our owne.

Lo hitherto the new borne state in teares
Was in her raw and wayling infancie,
During a hundred two and twentie yeares
Vnder the hand of straungers tyranny:
And now some better strength and youth appeares
Which promises a glad recourry:
For hard beginningshaue the greatest states
What with their owne, or neighbourers debates.

Euca

Euen like to Rheine which in his birth opprest,
Strangled almost with rocks and mightie hils,
Workes out a way to come to better rest,
Wars with the mountaines, striues against their wils:
Bringes forth his streames in vnitie possest
Into the quiet bed he proudlie fils,
Carrying that greatnes which he cannot keepe
Vnto his death and buriall in the deepe:

18

So did the worldes proud Mistres Rome at first Striue with a hard beginning, warr'd with need; Forcing her strong Confiners to the worst, And in her bloud her greatnes first did breed: So Spaine at home with Moores ere forth it burst Did practize long and in it selfe did bleed; So did our state begin with her owne woundes. To try her strength ere it enlarg'd her boundes.

19

But now comes Richard to succeed his sire,
Who much the glorie of our armes increast,
His fathers limits bound not his desire
He spreads the English Ensignes in the East:
And whilst his vertues would have raised him hyer
Treason, and malice his great actions ceast:
A faithles brother and a fatall king
Cut off his growth of glory in the spring.

Which

Rich, De

20

K. Iohn. Which wicked brother contrarie to course
False John vsurpes his Nephew Arthurs right,
Gets to the crowne by crast, by wrong, by sorce,
Rules it with lust, oppression, rigor, might:
Murders the lawfull heire without remorse,
Wherefore procuring all the worldes despisht,
A Tyrant loth'd, a homicide conuented
Poysoned he dies, disgrac'd and vnlamented.

Henry 3. Henrie his sonne is chosen king, though young
And Lewes of Fraunce (elected first) beguilde,
After the mightie had debated long,
Doubtfull to choose a straunger or a child:
With him the Barons (in these times grown strog)
Warre for their auncient lawes so long exild.
He graunts the Charter that pretended ease
And kept his owne, yet did his owne appease.

Edwardhis sonne a martiall king succeedes
Iust, prudent, graue, religious, fortunate:
Whose happy ordred raigne most fertile breeds
Plentie of mightie spirits to strength his state,
And worthy mindes, to manage worthy deeds
Th'experience of those times ingenerate:
For euer great imployment for the great
Quickens the bloud and honour doth beget.

And

23

And had not his mif-lead lascinious sonne

Edward the second, intermitted so

The course of glorie happilie begunne

Which brought him, and his fauorites to woe:

That happy current without stop had runne

Vnto the full of his sonne Edwards sto:

But who hath often seene in such a state,

Father and sonne like good, like fortunate.

Edward.1,

But now this great succeeder all repaires,
And rebrings-backe that discontinued good,
He buildes up strength and greatnes for his heires
Out of the vertues that adornd his bloud:
He makes his subjects Lords of more then theirs,
And sets their bounds farre wider then they stood:
Could greatnes have but kept what he had gote

It was enough he did, and what he wrought.

Edward 3.

And had his heire surviu'd him in due course,
What limits England had st thou found, what barre?
What world could have resisted so great force?
O more then men! two thunderbolts of warre,
Why did not time your ioined worth divorse
Thave made your severall glories greater farre?
Too prodigall was nature thus to doe,
To spend in one age, what should serve for two.

Edward she black prince who diedbefore bis fasher,

0

But

26

Supported with strong powre and victorie
Was lest vnto a child, ordain'd by fate
To stay the course of what might grow too hie:
Here was a stop that greatnes did abate
When powre vpon so weake a base did lie,
For lest great fortune should presume too farre
Such oppositions interposed are.

Neuer this lland better peopled stood,
Neuer more men of might, and mindes addrest,
Neuer more Princes of the royall bloud,
(If not too many, for the publique rest)
Nor euer was more treasure, wealth and good,
Then when this Ruchard first the crowne possess
Second of name, a name in two accurst,
And well we might have mist all but the first.

In this mans raigne began this fatall strife
The bloudy argument whereof we treate;
That dearely cost so many a Prince his life;
That spoild the weake, & euen consum'd the great,
That, wherein all calamitie was rife
That memory euen grieues her to repeate (lose,
And would that time would now this knowledge
But that tis good to learne by others woes.

Edward

Sonne of his worthy fonne deceased of late
The crowne and Scepter of this Realme to wield,
Appointing the protectors of his state
Two of his sonnes to be his better shield,
Supposing vnckles free from guile or hate
Would order all things for his better good,
In the respect and honour of their bloud.

Of these John Duke of Lancaster was one,
(Too great a subject growne, for such a state
The title of a king and what h' had done
In great exploits his mind did eleuate
Aboue proportion kingdomes stand vpon,
Which made him push at what his issue gate)
The other Edmond Langley, whose milde sprite
Affected quiet and a safe delight.

31

With these did interpose his proud vnrest
Thomas of woodstocke, one most violent,
Impatient of command, of peace, of rest,
Whose brow would shew, that which his hart had
His open malice and repugnant brest
Procur'd much mischiese by his discontent:
And these had all the charge of king and state,
Till by himselse he might it ordinate.

C 2.

And

32

And in the first yeares of this gouernement,
Things past, as first; the warres in Fraunce proceede
Though not with that same fortune and event
Being now not followed with such carefull heed,
Our people here at home growne discontent
Through great exactions insurrections breed,
Private respectes hindred the common weale,
And idle case doth on the mighty steale.

Too many kings breed factions in the court,
The head too weake, the members grown too great:
O this is that which kingdomes doth transport,
This plague the heavens do for iniustice threat
When children rule, who ever in this fort
Confound the state their auncestors did get;
For the ambitious once inur'd to raigne
Can never brooke a private state againe.

And kingdomes ever suffer this distresse.

For one or manie guide the infantking,
Which one or manie, tasting this excesse
Of greatnes and command; can never bring.
Their thoughts againe t'obay or to be lesse:
From hencethese insolencies ever spring,
Contempt of others whom they seeke to soile.
Then sollow leagues, destruction, ruine, spoile.

When

Whether it were that they which had the charge Suffred the king to take a youthfull vaine, That they their private better might inlarge:

Or whether he himselfe would farther straine of A (Thinking his yeares sufficient to discharge the The government) presumd to take the raigne, We will not saie: but now his eare he lendes

To youthfull counsell, and his lusts attends.

36

And courts were neuer barren yet of those Which could with subtle traine and apt aduise Worke on the Princes weakenes, and dispose Of seeble frailtie easiest to intice:

And such no doubt about this king arose, Whose slattery (the daungerous nurse of vice)

Got hand vpon his youth to pleasures bent Which lead by them did others discontent.

For now his vnckles grew much to mislike
These ill proceedings; were it that they saw,
That others sauor'd did aspiring seeke
Their nephew from their counsels to withdraw,
Seeing his nature stexible and meeke,
Because they onely would keepe all in awe:
Or that indeed they found the king and state
Abuse by such as now in office sate.

C 3-

38

Or rather else they all were in the fault,
Th'ambitious vnckles, th'indiscreet young king,
The greedy counsell and the Minions naught,
And all togither did this tempest bring;
Besides the times withall iniustice fraught,
Concurr'd in this confused disordering,
That we may truly say this spoild the state;
Youthfull Counsell, private gaine, partiall hate.

And sure the king plainly discouereth
Apparant cause his vnckles to suspect;
For John of Gaunt was said to seeke his death
By secret meanes, which came not to effect:
The Duke of Gloster likewise practiseth
In open world that all men might detect
And leagues his Nobles, and in greatest strength
Rises in armes against him too at length.

Vnder pretence from him to take away
Such as they said the states oppressors weare,
To whom the Realme was now become a pray;
The chiefe of whom they nam'd was Robert Vere
Then Duke of Ireland; bearing greatest sway
About the king, who held him only dere,
Him they would have remou'd and divers more,
Or else would never lay downe armes they swore.
The

The king was forst in that next Parliment
To grant them what he durst not well refuse,
For thither arm'd they came and fully bent
To suffer no repulse nor no excuse:
And here they did accomplish their intent
Where justice did her sword, not ballance vse:
To reuen that sacred place they violate
And there arest the sudges as they sate.

742

Which foone with many others had their end,
Cruelly flaine without the course of right,
And still these warres that publique good pretend
Worke most injustice being done for spight:
For the agricued euermore doe bend
Against those whom they see of greatest might,
Who though themselves are wrong'd & often forst,
Yet for they can doe most are thought the worst.

Now

44

Now that so much was granted as was sought,
A reconcilement made although not ment
Appeald them all in shew, but not in thought
Whilst every one seem'd outwardlie content:
Though hereby king, nor peeres, nor people got
Moreloue, more strength, or easier government;
But every day things now succeeded worse,
For good from kings must not be drawne by force.

And this it lo continued till by chance (dy'de; The Queene (which was the emperours daughter) When as the king t'establish peace with Fraunce And better for home quiet to prouide, Sought by contracting marriage to aduance His owne affaires against his vnckles pride:

Tooke the young daughter of king Charles to wife Which after in the end raisd greater strife.

Against this french aliance and this peace;
Hauing himselfe a working stirring mind
Which neuer was content the warres should cease:
Whether he did dishonourable finde
Those articles that did our boundes decrease,
And therfore storm'd because the crown had wrog;
Or that he fear'd the king would grow too strong;

Or what socuer mou'd him; this is sure
Hereby he wrought his ruine in the end,
And was a fatall cause that did procure
The swift approching mischieses that attend:
For lo the king no longer could indure
Thus to be crost in what he did intend,
And therefore watcht but some occasion sit
Tattach the Duke when he thought least of it.

And fortune now to further this intent
The great Earle of S. Paule doth hither bring,
From Charles of Fraunce vnto the young Q. fent
To see both her and to salute the king:
To whom he shewes his vnckles discontent
And of his secret dangerous practising,
How he his subjects sought to sulleuate
And breake the league with Fraunce concluded late.

To whom the futtle Earle forthwith replies,
Great Prince it is within your power with ease,
To remedy such seares, such is is lousies,
And rid you of such mutiners as thease;
By cutting off that which might greater rise,
And now at first preventing this disease,
And that before he shall your wrath disclose,
For who threates first means of revenge doth lose.

D
First

50

First take his head, then tell the reason why,
Stand not to finde him guilty by your lawes,
Easier you shall with him your quarrell try
Dead then aliue who hath the better cause:
For in the murmuring vulgar vsually
This publique course of yours compassion drawes,
Especially in cases of the great
Which worke much pitty in the vndiscreat.

And this is fure though his offence be such,
Yet doth calamitie attract commorse,
And men repine at Princes bloudshed much
How iust-socuer judging tis by force:
I know not how their death gives such a tuch
In those that reach not to a true discourse;
That so shall you observing formall right
Bestill thought as vniust and win more spight.

And oft the cause, may come preuented so,
And therefore when tis done, let it be heard;
So shall you hereby scape your private wo
And satisfie the world to, afterward:
What need you weigh the rumors that shall go?
What is that breath being with your life compard?
And therefore if you will be rul'd by me
Strangled or poison'd secret let him be.

And

And then araigne the chiefe of those you find Were of his faction secretly compact,
Whom you maie wisely order in such kind
That you maie such confessions then exact,
As both you maie appease the peoples mind
And by their death much aggravate the fact:
So shall you rid your selfe of dangers quite
And shew the world that you have done but right.

This counsell vttred vnto such an eare
As willing listens to the safest waies,
Workes on the yeelding matter of his feare,
Which easelie to any course obeies:
For euerie Prince seeing his daunger neere
By anie meanes his quiet peace assaies:
And still the greatest wronges that euer were
Haue then bin wrought when kings were put in fear.

And long it was not ere he apprehendes
The Duke, who close to Calice was conuei'd,
And th' Earles of Arundell and Warwike sendes,
Both in close prisons strongly to be laid;
And some the Duke his life vnquiet endes,
Strangled in secret ere it was bewraide;
And Arundell was put to publike death,
But Warwike by great meanes he banisheth.

And

32

56

And for his person he procures a guard
A thousand Archers daily to attend,
Which now upon the act he had prepard
As th'argument his actions to defend:
But yet the world had now conceiu'd so hard
That all this nought availd him in the end:
In vaine with terror is he fortified
That is not guarded with firme love beside.

Now storme his vnckles albeit in vaine,

For that no remedy they could deuise,

They might their sorrowes inwardly complaine,

But outwardly they needs must temporise:

The king was great, and they should nothing gaine

T'attempt reuenge or offer once to rise, (strong

This league with Fraunce had made him now so

That they must needs as yet indure this wrong.

For like a Lion that escapes his bounds
Hauing bin long restraind his vieto straie,
Raunges the restles woods, staies on no ground,
Riottes with bloudshed, wantons on his praie:
Seekes not for need but in his pride to wound,
Glorying to see his strength and whathe may;
So this vnbridled king freed of his scares
In libertie himselfe thus wildly beares.

. 9 45 tion 7

59

For standing on himselfe he sees his might
Out of the compasse of respective awe,
And now beginnes to violate all right
While no restraining seare at hand he saw:
Now he exactes of all, wasts in delight,
Riots in pleasure, and neglects the law;
He thinkes his crowne is licensed to do ill
That lesse should list, that may do what it will.

Thus b'ing transported in this sensuall course.
No frend to warne, no counsell to withstand,
He still proceedeth on from bad to worse,
Sooth'd in all actions that he tooke in hand
By such as all impiety did nurse,
Commending euer what he did commaund:
Vnhappy kings that neuer may be taught
To know themselues or to discerne their fault.

61

And whilst all sylent gricue at what is donne,
The Duke of Herford then of courage bold.
And worthily great Iohn of Gaunts first sonne.
Veters the passion which he could not hold,
In sad discourse vpon this course begun,
Which he to Mombray Duke of Norsolke told;
To th'end he being great about the king
Might doe some good by better counselling.

The

62

Proifart.
Pol. Virg.
& Hall, de liner it in this fort.

The faithles Duke that presentlie takes hold
Of such advantage to infinuate
Hastesto the king, peruerting what was told,
And what came of good minde he makes it hate:
The king that might not now be so controld
Or censur'd in his course, much frets thereat;
Sendes for the Duke, who doth such wordes deny
And craues the combate of his enemy.

63

Which straight was granted, and the date affign'd When both in order of the field appeare
To right each other as th' euent should find,
And now both euen at point of combate were
When lo the king change sodenly his mind,
Casts downe his warder and so staies them there,
As better now aduisd what waie to take
Which might for his assured safety make.

64

For now considering (as it likely might)
The victoric should hap on Herfords side,
A man most valiant and of noble sprite,
Belou'd of all, and euer worthy tride:
How much he might be grac'd in publique sight
By such an act as might advance his pride,
And so become more popular by this,
Which he searce, too much he already is.

And

And therefore he resolues to banish both,
Though th'one in chiefest fauour with him stood.
A man he dearely lou'd and might be loth
To leave him that had done him so much good:
Yet having cause to do as now he doth
To mitigate the envie of his bloud,
Thought best to loose a friend, to rid a foe,
And such a one as now he doubted so.

66

And therefore to perpetuall exile hee

Mowbray condemnes; Herford but for ten yearest

Thinking (for that the wrong of this decree

Compardwith greater rigour lesse appeares)

It might of all the better liked be:

But yet such murmuring of the fact he heares,

That he is faine soure of the ten forgiue,

And judg'd him sixe yeares in exile to liue.

At whose departure hence out of the land,
O how the open multitude reueale
The wondrous loue they bare him vnderhand,
Which now in this hote passion of their zeale
They plainely shewde that all might vnderstand
How deare he was vnto the common weale:
They feard not to exclaime against the king
As one that sought all good mens ruining.

Time

Vnto

68

Vnto the shore with teares, with sighes, with mone
They him conduct, cursing the bounds that staie
Their willing scete that would have further gone
Had not the scarefull Ocean stopt their way:
Why Neptune hast thou made vs stand alone
Deuided from the world, for this say they?
Hemd in to be a spoile to tyranny
Leauing affliction hence no way to flie?

Are we lockt vp poore soules, here tabide
Within the watery prison of thy waves,
As in a fold, where subject to the pride
And lust of rulers we remaine as slaves?
Here in the reach of might, where none can hide
From th' eie of wrath, but onely in their graves?
Happy confiners you of other landes
That shift your soile and oft scape tyrants hands.

Ah must we leave him here; that here were sit
We should retaine the pillar of our state;
Whose vertues well deserve to governe it,
And not this wanton young esseminate?
Why should not he in regall honour sit,
That best knowes how a realme to ordinate?
Yet one daie a we hope thou shalt bring backe
Deare Bulling brooks the justice that we lacke.
Thus

Thus muttred to the male contented fort to That love kings best before they have them still, That love kings best before they have them still, That would as oft change as they change their will: For this good Duke had wonne them in this fort to By suckring them and pittying of their ill, do Hand That they supposed straight it was one thing, so To be both a good man, and a good king of their ill.

When as the graver fort that law the course! I And knew that Princes maie not be controlded in a Likt welto suffer this for search of worse; and some Since many great, one kingdome cannot hold the Grant for now they saw intestine strift of sorte and it as The apt idenided state intangle would, blue flowed If he should stay whom they would make their head, By whom the yulgar body might be lead, and but A

They sawlike wife that Princes of care faint and To buy their quiet with the price of wrong:
And better twere that now a few complaint.
Then all should morne, as well the weake as strong:
Seeing how little Realmes by change doe gaine,
And therefore learned by observing long!
T'admire times past, sollow the present will.
Wish for good Princes, but t'indure the ill.

E

For

For when it nought auailes what folly then To striue against the current of the time ? welter! I Who will throw downe himselfe for other men brid That make a ladder by his fall to clime? bluow mal Or who would feeke t'imbroile his country when He might have reft fuffering but others crime? Since wifemen euerhaue preferred farre valla sant Th'vniustest peace, before the instess warre.

Thus they confidered that in quiet fate, WI Rich or content, or else vnfit to ftriue: driveral bnA Peace louer-wealth, hating a troublous state Doth willing reasons for their rest contriue in some? But if that all were thus confiderate a work work no How should in court the great, the fauour d thriue? Factions must be and these varieties, Abluor and And some must fall that other some may rife. Wy

Burlong the Duke remaind nor in exile you I Before that John of Gausse his father dies, Vpon whose state the king seasd now this while Dispoling of it ashis enemies ground would it and I This open wrong no longer could beguile miss? The world that faw these great indignities, Which fo exasperates the mindes of all That they resolu'd him home againe to call. Tor

For

Transported in his il-conceiued thought, line would?
That made him so to prosecute the thing lead bank
Against all law and in a course so naught: year and T
And this aduantage to the Duke did bring law and T
Fitter occasions whereupon he wrought: proud and T
For to a man so strong and of such might man and M
He gives him more, that takes away his right.

The king in this meane time, I know not how.

Was drawne into some actions forth the land,

T'appeale the Irish that revolted now;

And there attending what he had in hand in (grow,

Neglects those parts from whence worse daungers.)

As ignorant how his affaires did standard and some solbod.

Whether the plot was wrought it should be so, and or had or had on his affaires did standard and solve solbod.

Or that his fate did draw him on to go.

An ignorant and idle overlight, sing begins there, but looking to the Dukes proceedings there, but looking in the court of France where best the might, where both the king and all assured were loud out of the But being now exild he thought him sure and all assured being now exild he thought him sure and all assured being now exild he thought him sure and all assured being now exild he thought him sure and all assured being him force from farther doubting liu'd secure.

THE BIRST BOOKE'T

80

This overshadowing providence on hie,
And dazeleth the clearest sighted eies,
That they see not how nakedly they lie:
There where they little thinke the storme doth rise,
And overcasts their cleare security:
When man hath stopt al waies save only that
That (least suspected) ruine enters at.

And now was all disorder in th' excesse

And whatsoeuer doth a change portend,

As idle luxury, and wantonnes,

Proteus-like varying pride, vaine without end:

Wrong-worker Rice, motiue to oppresse,

Endles exactions, which the idle spend,

Consuming vsury and credits crackt,

Cald on this purging warre that many lackt.

Then ill perswading want in martiall minds,
And wronged patience, long oppress with might,
Loosenes in all, which no religion bindes,
Commaunding force the measure made of right,
Gaue suell to this fire, that easie sindes dead of the light.
The way constant the whole indangerd quite:
These were the publique breeders of this warre,
By which still greatest states consounded are.

For

For now this peace with France had shut in here The ouergrowing humours warres doe spend For where t'euacuate no employments were Wider th' vnwildy burthen doth diftend; Men wholy vid to warre, peace could not beare; As knowing no courfe else where to to bend: For brought vp in the broiles of these two Realmes, They thought best fishing still in troubled streames.

Like to a river that is stopt his course Doth violate his bankes, breakes his owne bed, Destroies his bounds and ouer-runs by force The neighbour fields irregularly fpread some of Euen so this sodaine stop of warre dothnurse Home broiles within it felfe, from others lead: So dangerous the change hereof is tride Ere mindes come foft or otherwife imploid

And all this makes for thee, ô Bullingbrooke, To worke a waie vnto thy Soueraintie; This care the heavens, fate and formme tooke To bring thee to thy feepter eafily stool or primos? Vpon the fals that hap which him for fooke Who crownd a king, a king yet must not die, Thou wert ordaind by prouidence to raife A quarrell lasting longer then thy daies.

E 3.

For

For now this absent king out of his land,
Where though he shew'd great sprite and valor then,
(Being attended with a worthy band of valiant Peeres, and most couragious men)
Gaue time to them at home that had in hand
Th' vngodly worke and knew the season when;
Who faile not to aduise the Duke with speed,
Solliciting to what he soone agreed.

For presently vpon so good report,
He doth with cunning traine and pollicy
Conuay himselfe out of the French kings court
Vnder pretence to go to Brittanie:
And with his followers that to him resort
Landed in England. Welcom'd joyfully
Of th' altring vulgar apt for changes still
As headlong caried with a present will.

And com'd to quiet shore but not to rest,
The first night of his ioy sull landing here
A searcfull vision doth his thoughts molest,
Seeming to see in wofull forme appeare
A naked goodly woman all distrest,
Which with sul-weeping eies and rent-white haire,
Wringing her hands as one that grieud and praid,
With sighes commixt, with words it seem'd shee said,

O whither dost thou tend my vnkind some?
What mischiese dost thou go about to bring
To her whose Genius thou here lookst vpon,
Thy mother countrey whence thy selfe didst spring?
O whither dost thou in ambition run,
To change due course by soule disordering?
What bloudshed,ô what broyles dost thou comence
To last for many wosull ages hence?

Stay here thy foote, thy yet vinguilty foote,
That canst not stay when thou art farther in,
Retire thee yet vissaind whilst it doth boote,
The end is spoile of what thou dost begin:
Injustice neuer yet tooke lasting roote,
Nor held that long impiety did win:
The babes vinborne, shall ô be borne to bleed
In this thy quarrell if thou doe proceede.

OI

Thus faid shee ceast, when he in troubled thought
Grieu'd at this tale and sigh'd, and this replies:
Deare Country ô I have not hither brought
These Armes to spoile but for thy liberties:
Tho sinne be on their head that this have wrought
Who wrongd me first, and thee doe tyrannise;
I am thy Champion and I seeke my right,
Prouokt I am to this by others spight.
This

92

This this pretence faith shee, th' ambitious finde
To smooth iniustice, and to flatter wrong:
Thou dost not know what then will be thy mind
When thou shalt see thy selfe advanc'd and strong:
When thou hast shak'd off that which others binde
Thou some forgettest what thou learnedst long:
Men doe not know what then themselves will be
When as more then themselves, themselves they see.

And herewithall turning about he wakes, Lab'ring in sprite, troubled with this strange sight: The And must a while, waking aduisement takes and of what had past in sleepe and silent night. Yet hereof no important reck'ning makes and silent night. But as a dreame that vanisht with the light: The day designes, and what he had in hand the Left it to his diuerted thoughts vaskand.

Seemes not t'affect, that which he did effect,
Or els perhaps seemes as he ment indeed,
Sought but his owne, and did no more expect:
Then fortune thou art guilty of his deed,
That didst his state aboue his hopes erect,
And thou must be are some blame of his great sin
That lest'st him worse then when he did begin.

Thou

Thou didst conspire with pride, and with the time
To make so easie an assent to wrong, and with the time
That he that had no thought so hie to clime,
(With favoring comfort still allut'd along)
Was with occasion thrust into the crime, with the third steering others weakenes and his part so strong:

And ô in such a case who is it will

Dogood, and searc that maie live free with ill.

We will not say nor thinke O Lancaster,
But that thou then didst meane as thou didst swere.
Vpon th' Euangelists at Doncaster,
In th' eie of heauen, and that assembly there
That thou but as an vpright orderer
Sought'sto reforme th' abused kingdome here,
And get thy right, and what was thine before,
And this was all, thou would'st attempt no more.

Though we might say & thinke that this pretence Was but a shadow to the intended act,
Because the event doth argue the offence.
And plainely seemes to manifest the saction.
For that hereby thou mightst win considence.
With those whom els thy course might hap distract.
And all suspition of thy drift remove.
Since easily men credit whom they love.

F

THE FORST POORE.

98

Into the low deepe buried finnes long past
T' examine and conferre iniquity,
Whereof faith would no memory should last:
That our times might not have t' exemplifie
With aged staines, but with our owne shame cast,
Might thinke our blot the first not done before,
That new-made sins might make vs blush the more.

And let vnwresting charity beleeue
That then thy oth with thy intent agreed,
And others faith, thy faith did first deceive,
Thy after fortune forc'd thee to this deed:
And let no man this idle censure give
Because th' event proves so, twas so decreed:
For ô what counsels sort to other end
Then that which frailty did at first intend?

100

Whilst those that are but outward lookers on,
That cannot sound these misteries of state,
Deemes things were so contriu'd as they are done,
Holding that policie, that was but fate: (begun,
Wondring how strange twas wrought, how close
And thinke all actions else did tend to that,
When ô how short they come, or cast too fare
Making the happy wifer then they are.

Rus

But

Dalge

IQI

And facrifiz'd vnto the peoples love,

The death of those that chiefe in enuy stood

As th' Officers, who first these dangers proves

The treasorer and those that they thought good.

Buffy and Greene by death he must remove,

These were the men the people thought did cause.

Those great exactions and abused the lawes.

This done, his cause was preacht with learned skil,
And th' Archbishop of Canterbury shew'd did it.

A pardon sent from Rome, to all that will Take part with him, and quit the faith they ow'd.

To Richard, as a Prince vnstrandill, learned and it.

On whom the crowne was fatally bestow'd: least all the And easie-yeelding zeale was quickly caught.

With what the mouth of gravity had taught.

The great alliance made twixe God and vs,
Th' intelligence that earth doth hold with heaven.

Sacred religion, ô that thou must thus and allow the Be made to smooth our waies valual, vneuen, and the Brought from about earth-quarrels to discusse.

Must men beguile our soules to winne our wils.

And make our zeale the furtherer of ils?

E 2. But

1104

But the ambitious to advance their might 1118 Dispence with heaven and what religion would, The armed will finde right, or else make right, If this meanes wrought not, yet another should: And this and other now doe all incite 1910 1911 To strength the faction that the Duke doth hold; Who easily obtained what he sought, His vertues and his love fo greatly wrought.

The king still busied in this Irish warre nob zid! Which by his valour theredid well fucceede, in brid Had newes how here his Lords revolted are, Andhow the Duke of Herford doth proceed: In these affaires he feares are growne too farre, Hastes his returne from thence with greatest speed; But was by tempelts, windes, and seas debarr'd Asif they likewise had against him warr'd.

But at the length, though late, in wales he landes, Where thorowly inform dof Henries force, And well advertischow his owne case stands, Come to the Which to his griefe he feestendes to the worfe: He leavest Annarle, at Milford all those bands He brought from freland; taking thence his course To Conwaie all disguisd with sourceene more To th' Earle of Salisburie thither fent before.

Thin-

Thinking the Sarle had raild some forces there Whom there he findes for faken all alone, which The people in those partes which leuied were

B'ing closely shronke away dispersid and gone:

The king had ftayd too long, and they in feare Refolued every man to shift for one, ship by belled

At this amass such fortune he laments,

Foresees his fall whereto each thing consents.

108

Inchis disturb'd tumultuous broken state, Whilst yet th' event stood doubtfull what should be, Whilst nought but headlong running to debate And glittering troupes and armor men might fee! Furgand feare, compassion, wrath, and hate Confused through all the land no Corner free: The strong all mad, to strife, to ruine bent; The weaker waild, the aged they lament,

And blame their many yeares that line follong Tofee the horrour of these miseries : 12 14 14 14 14 Why had not we (faid they) dyde with the strong Inforrainefields inhonourable wife? In iust exploits, and lawfull without wrong, And by the valiant hand of enemies 21 115 with 01 02 And not thus now referred in our age 1019w 11.11 To home confusion and disordered rage. Calme

Vnto

THE PIRST BOOKE,

110

Sad wailing women, there to vow and pray

For husbands, brothers, or their sonnes gone out

To bloudshed, whom nor tears, nor loue could stay:

Here graue religious fathers which much doubt

The sad euents these broyles procure them may,

As Prophets warne, exclaime, disswade these crimes

By the examples fresh of other times.

111

Another conquest by these fatall waies?
What must your own hands make your selues a pray
To desolation, which these tumults raise?
What Dane, what Norman, shall prepare his way
To triumph on the spoile of your decaies?
That which nor France nor all the world could doe
In vnion, shall your discord, bring you to?

112

Conspire against vs neighbour nations all.

That enuy at the height whereto w' are growne;

Coniure the barbarous North, and let them call

Straunge fury from far distant shores vinknowne,

And let them altogither on vs fall;

So to diuert the ruine of our owne,

That we forgetting what doth so incense.

May turne the hand of malice to desence.

Cator

Calme

1131

Calme these tempestuous spirits O mighty Lord,
This threatning storme that ouer hangs the land,
Make them consider ere they'vnsheath the sword
How vaine is th' earth, this point wheron they stand,
And with what sad calamities is stoor'd
The best of that, for which th' Ambirious band:
Labor the end of labor, strife of strife,
Terror in death and horrour after life.

Thus they in zeale whose humbled thoughts were Whil'st in this wide spread volume of the skies, The booke of prouidence disclosed stood, Warnings of wrath, foregoing miseries; In lines of fire and caracters of blood, There fearefull formes in dreadfull flames arise, Amazing Comets, threatning Monarches might And new-seene starres, vnknowne vnto the night.

Red fiery dragons in the aire doe flie,
And burning Metcors, poynted-streaming lights,
Bright starres in midst of day appeare in skie,
Prodigious monsters, gastly fearefull sights:
Straunge Ghosts, and apparitions terrifie,
The wofull mother her owne birth affrights,
Seeing a wrong deformed infant borne
Grieues in her paines, deceiu'd in shame doth morn.
The

THE FIRST BOOKE, THE

116

The Earth as if afeard of bloud and woundes

Trembles in terror of these falling bloes:

The hollow concaues give out groning sounds

And sighing, murmurs to lament our woes:

The Ocean all at discord with his boundes,

Reiterates his strange vntimely floes:

Nature all out of course to checke our course,

Neglects her worke to worke in vs remorse.

So great a wracke vnto it selfe doth lo
Disordered mortality prepare:
That this whole frame doth euen labour so
Her ruine vnto frailty to declare;
And trauailes to fore-signific the wo,
That weake improvidence could not beware:
For heaven and earth, and aire and seas and all
Taught men to see, but not to shun their fall.

118

Is man so deare vnto the heavens that they
Respect the waies of earth, the workes of sin?
Doth this great all this vniver sall weigh
The vaine designes that weakenes doth begin?
Or doe our feare sather of zeale make way
Vnto this errour ignorance lives in?
Making our saults the cause that move these powres
That have their cause from other cause then ours?
Or

119

Or doe the conscience of our wicked deedes
Apply to sinne the terrour of these sights,
Hapning at the instant when commotion breedes
Amazing only timorous vulgar wights,
Who euer aggrauating that which seedes
Their seares, still find out matter that affrights,
Whilst th' impious sierce, neglecting seele no touch,
And weigh too light what other seare so much?

120

Ah no, th'eternall powre that guides this frame
And serues him with the instruments of heauen
To call the earth and summon vp our shame,
By an edict from euerlasting giuen;
Forbids mortality to search the same,
Where sence is blind, and wit of wit bereauen:
Terror must be our knowledge, seare our skill,
T'admire his worke and tremble at his will.

121

And these beginnings had this impious warre,
Th' vngodly bloudshed that did so desile
The beauty of thy sields, and even did marre
The flowre of thy chiese pride ô fairest Ile:
These were the causes that incensed so faire
The civil wounding hand inragd with spoile,
That now the living with afflicted eie
Looke backe with griese on such calamity.

119

Apply to finne the terrour of these fights,

I tapping at the instant when commotion breedes

Amazing only timorous vulgar wights,

Who ever aggravating that which seedes

Their seares, talking outmatter that afright

Whilst the impious serves, neglecters

And weight to light what other searce form.

OSI -

Annothic cardinates and an entrope of the transport of the entrope of the entrope

ISI

And the feber innings had this implotes were a fine in a court, the flower of the court of the first of the first of the flower of the court of the flower of the causes the fewer of the causes that in central to do the first of the first of the flower of the first of the first

THE AROUMENT OF THE SECOND BOOKE.

King Richard mones his wrong and wailes his
And here betrayd to London he is led. (raigne:
Basely at tyrid attending Identords traine,
Where th' one is skarnd, the other welcomed.
His Wife mistaking him doth much complaine
And both togither greatly sorrowed:
In hope to sauchis life and case his thrull
Heyeelds up state, and Rule, and Crowne, and all.

Being eaffer to reuenge, then to reward.

The late great mighty monarch on the shore?

To call backe sale obedience sted before:

Toyles, and in vaine, his toile and labour spends, back More hearts be sought to gaine he lost the more:

All turned their faces to the rising sunne point sted with And leaves his setting some night begun.

THE SECOND BOOKE

This Percy was Earle of Warfler, and browher to the Earle of NorthwaThe household traine for sooke their wretched Lord, When with thy staffe of charge dishonoured, Thou brak'st thy faith, not steward of thy word, And tookst his part that after tooke thy head: (sword; When thine owne hand had strengthned first his For such great merits doe obraid, and call For great reward, or thinke the great too small.

And kings love not to be beholding ought, (worst: Which makes their chiefest friends oft speed the For those by whom their fortunes have bin wrought Put them in mind of what they were at first: Whose doubtfull faith if once in question brought Tis thought they will offend because they durst, And taken in a fault are never spar'd, Being easier to revenge, then to reward.

And thus these mighty actors somes of change,
These partizanes of factions, often tride
That in the smoake of innovations strange
Build huge vncertaine plots of vnsure pride:
And on the hazard of a bad exchange in both and of the hazard of a bad exchange in both a bad exchange in bad exchange in both a bad exchange in bad ex

O Maiestie lest naked all alone
But with th' vnarmed title of thy right,
Those gailant troupes, thy fortune followers gone;
And all that pompe (the complements of might)
h' amazing shadowes that are cast vpon
The cares of Princes, to beguile the sight,
Are vanisht cleane, and only frailty lest
Thy selfe of all, besides thy selfe bereft.

Like when some great Colossus, whose strong base
Ormighty props are shronke or sunke awaie,
Fore-shewing ruine, threatning all the place
That in the danger of his fall doth stay,
All straight to better safetie slocke apace,
None rest to helpe the ruine while they maie:
The perill great and doubtfull the redresse,
Men are content to leave right in distresse.

As stately T bames inricht with many a flood,
And goodly rivers that have made their graves
And buried both their names and all their good
Within his greatnes to augment his waves;
Glides on with pompe of waters vnwithstood
Vnto the Ocean, which his tribute craves
And laies vp all his wealth within that powre,
Which in it selfeall greatnes doth devour.

THE SECOND BOOKE!

8

Vnto the all-receiving Bullingbrooke,
Who wonders at himselse how he should game
So manie hearts as now his partie tooke,
And with what ease and with how stender paine,
His fortune gives him more then he could looke, and
What he imagind never could be wrought throw A
Is powrd vpon him, farre beyond his thought, led yell

Without the compasse of accomplishment, addition of the ventred on to that successe do grow, was a soll of that even the Authors do admire the events and all of the sold of the property of the property of the property of the sold of t

And Richard who looks fortune in the backe, A
Sees headlong-lightnes running from the right, and Amazed stands to note how great a wracke and back
Offaith his riots caused, what morrall spight and aid will
The beare him, who did law and instice lacked as bald
Sees how concealed hate breakes out in sight, and will
And seare-depressed enuy pent before
When sit occasion thus valockt the dorest in the law.

Like

M

Like when some mastive whelpe disposed to plaie
A whole consused heard of beastes doth chace,
Which with one vile consent run all awaie,
If any hardier then the rest in place
But turne the head that idle seare to stay,
Backe straight the daunted chaser turnes his sace,
And all the rest with bold example led
As fast run on him as before they sted.

12

This many-headed monster Multitude:
And he who late was feard is set upon,
And by his owne Astaon-like pursude,
His owne that had all love and awe forgone;
Whom breath and shadowes only did delude,
And newer hopes which promises perswade:
Though rare performed promises so made.

Which seeing this: thus to himselse complaines:
O why do you fond salse deceived so
Run headlong to that change that nothing gaines
But gaine of sorrow, onlie change of wo?
Which is all one if he be like that raignes:
Why will you buy with bloud what you forgoe?
Tis nought but shewes that ignorance esteemes,
The thing possess is not the thing it seemes.
And

THE SECOND BOOKE.

And when the sinnes of Bullingbrooke shall be
As great as mine, and you vnanswered
In these your hopes; then may you wish for me
Your lawfull Sou'raigne from whose saith you sled,
And grieued in your soules the error see
That shining promises had shadowed:
As th' humorous sicke remouing sinde no ease,
When changed Chambers change not the disease.

Then shall you finde this name of liberty
(The watchword of rebellion euer vsd
The idle eccho of vncertainty,
That euermore the simple hath abusd)
But new-turnd seruitude and miserie,
And euen the same and worse before refused,
Th' aspirer once attaind vnto the top
Cuts off those meanes by which himselfe got vp.

And with a harder hand and streighter raine.

Doth curbe that loosenes he did finde before,

Doubting th' occasion like might serue againe,

His owne example makes him feare the more:

Then ô injurious land what dost thou gaine.

To aggrauate thine owne afflictions store?

Since thou must needs obay to gouernement,

And no rule euer yet could all content.

Licentious fruits of indifferent desires desired with the wind of the line of value of value

Who fees northat fees ought, wo worth the while)
The easie way that greatnesse hath to fall open will
Enuirond with deceit, hem'd in with guile,
South'd vp in flattery, fawned on of all:
Within his owne living, as in exile,
Within his owne living, as in exile,
Heares but with others eares or not at all:
Euen made a pray onely vnto a few,
Who locke vp grace that would to others shew.

And who as let in leafe doe faime the crowne,
And ioy the vie of Maiestie and mighty
Whilst we hold but the shadow of our owne,
Pleased but with shewes, and dasied with delighted.
They as huge vaproportion of shountaines growne
Betweene our land and vs. shadowing our light,
Bereaue the rest of ioy and vs of loue,
And keepe downe all to keepe themselves above.

And keepe downe all to keepe themselves above.

Which

THE SECOND BOOKE, T

20 1

Which woulds with griefe poore vnrespected zeale
When grace holdes no proportion in the partes;
When distribution in the common weale
Of charge and honour due to good desarts
Is stopt, when others greedy hands must deale so of
The benefit that Maiestie imparts:
What good we ment comes gleaned home but light
Whilst we are robd of praise, they of their right.

Th' vnreconcileable difunion

Is growne betweene m'aggraved realme and mee,

And by their fault, whose faith I trusted one white and

My easie nature trastable and free, I and a sidnid W

Scone drawing to what my councel would have done

Is thus betraid by them and my neglect, a share and

Easiest deceiud where least I did suspect, a share and W

And ioy che troi robro diw (skied Dake)

While we had so to conferred and ioy the troi of the conferred and troid of the loss of the loss sedimetr.

Yet

of Capitle. waster by

lisenz

And also see that instice might be had On those the Duke of Glosters death procur'd, And fuch remoud from councell as were bad, His cofin Henrie would he there affur'd On humbleknees before his grace be glad To aske him pardon to be well fecur'd, And haue his right and grace restor'd againe, The which was all he laboured t'obtaine.

And therefore he a Parley doth exhort, Perswadeshim leave that vnbeseeming place And with a Princely hardines refort Vnto his people, that attend his grace: They ment the publique good and not his hurt, 10/1 And would mostioifull be to feehis face: He laies his foule to pledge, and takes his oth The oft of Christ an oftage for his troth.

This profer with fuch protestations made Vnto a king that so nere daunger stood, valority o Was a sufficient motiue to perswade son and los When no way els could thew a face lof good to in lo Th'vnhonourable meanes of fafety bade where o? Dangeraccept what Maiestie withstood: When better choices are not to be had us less and We needs must take the feeming best of bad. SUBTE

Yet standsh'in doubt a while what way to take, And doth confer with that small staying troope That fortune left; which neuer would forfake. Their poore distressed Lord, nor euer stoope To any hopes the stronger part could make: Good Carlile, Ferby and fir Stephen Scroope

The Bishop of Carlile. Lisbray.

With that most worthy Montague were al, Earle of Sa. That were content with Maiestie to fall.

> O Time, commitnot facrilegious thefe Vppon the holy faith of these good men: Let not succeeding ages be bereft Of such examples worthy of our Pen: Nor thou magnanim'ous Leigh shalt not be left In darkenes for thy constant honour then, That then to faue thy faith wouldst loose thy head, That reverent head that all men pittied.

Nor confeience would that I should injury

Lenico de Artoi, a Gafcoyn.

O Jenico thy memory for cleere, of the grid homy For being not ours, though wish that Gascony Claimd not for hers the faith we hold so deere; dil So England should have this small companie av it Wholy her owne, and shee no partner heere; But lets deuide this good betwixt vs both, ad and W Take sheethy birth and we will have thy troth.

Graue

29

Grave Montague, whom long experience taught In either fortune; this aduitd his king we mai ano. I Deare Sou raigne know, the matter that is fought he a sonely now your Maiestie to bring about as each We From out of this poore safety you have got need not Into their hands, that else hold everything and he want of all, or add his Mothing but onely you they want of all, or add his And wanting you, they nothing cheirs can call this.

Here have you craggy rockes to take your part
That never will betray their faith to you; leb and W
These trustic mountaines here will never start and W
But stand to obtaid their shame that are vnitrue, W
Here maie you sence your safetie with shall art have
Against the pride of that consided Crewello amo?
If men will not, these very clisses will sight y shall o?
And be sufficient to desend your right of your box.

31

Then keepeyou here, and here shall you beliedd
Within short space the sliding faith of those thin but A
That cannot long their resolution holds always of Repent the course their idle rashines chose aid slado
For that same mercenarie saith they sold singurated
With least occasions discontented growers bloom
With least occasions discontented growers bloom
And insolent those voluntarie bands, south bad but A
Presuming how by them he chieflie stands as well.

H. 3. And

Long time where now he is, or any where?

Besides what discipline can he retaine

Where as he dargs not keepe them voder search

For search hand them to revolt againe?

So that it selfe when greatnes cannot be are in the With her owne waight must needes confusely fall.

Without the helpe of other force at all.

Where descriptockes, and hils no succours give, To Where description and no comforts are, Where see can do no good, manie not live: Managed the Orean to prepare to be Some other place if this should not relieve; So shall you tire his force, consume his strength. And weary all his followers out at length.

And infinite occasions you shall find, an addition of the reble even in the prime to mind the prime to make and to small since of the reble even in the prime to mind the confession of the crime of the

35

But of conceiud renolt men once espie, im a lo mo Straight shrinke the weake, the great wil not indure, Th' impatient run, the discontented slies and no? The friend his friends example doth procure, a but And altogither haste them presently as becalled of Some to their home, some hide, others that stay has To reconcile themselves, the rest betray a boundary.

Whathope have you that ever Bullingbrooked Will live a subject that hath tride his fare do not not you looke also so the Where he must alwaics feare, and you must hate and And never thinke that he this quarrel tooke to bull To reobtaine thereby his private state; but, some I still the Twas greater hopes that he rece did him call do do And he will thrust for all, or else loose all or else loose all else loose all or else loose all else loose all

Nor stuff this funde death nor his oth, but but You know his faith, you tride it before hand, but and I His fault is death and now to look his troth, and big You have his life he will not greatly stand and aid to Nor crust your kindmans proffer, since you both but Shew bloud impliness is no stedfast band; with a What though he hath no title, he hath might would be That makes a title where there is no hight and by both but but hat how he had no be the hath might would be the but he had no be the hath might would be that he had not be the hath might would be the hath might woul

The Bishup of Carlile.

Thus he : when that good Bishop thus replies ! But of a mind chat quiet did affect or buissono lo sus My Lord, bmuft confesses your case lies, il main ? You have great bause your subjects to suspect mi'd'T And counterplotagainst their subtesties of briefind You all good care and honeftic megle contrigor labor A And feare the worst what infolence maie doe, one? Or armed fury maid incente them to the line opro T

But yet my Lord, feare maic as well transport Your care beyond the truth of what is ment, will liv! As otherwise neglect maie fall too short on 1864 10 Where he must alweinstein indexed on I where the minimax aron II But let vsweigh the thing which they exhort on bal Tis Peace, submission and a parlament, an indoor o'T Which how expedienctis for either part and a sew T Twere good we judge with an empartiall harrow but

And first for you my Lord, in griefe we see 101/ The miserable case wherein you stand and wond no Y Voidhere of succour, helpe or maiestie, sissual sill On this poote promontory of your land, sid out oT And where how long a time your grace may be, 101/ Expeding what may fall into your hand buold world We knownot: finceth elent of things do lient and W Clos'd vpindanknes far from mortalleio slam sall T

And

41

And how vnfit it were you should protract
Long time in this so dangerous disgrace,
As though that you good spirit and courage lackt
To issue out of this opprobrious place:
When even the face of kings do oft exact
Feare and remorse in faulty subjects base,
And longer stay a great presumption drawes
That you were guilty or did doubt your cause.

What subjects ever so inraged would dare
To violate a Prince, t' offend the bloud
Of that renowmed race, by which they are
Exaked to the glorie of this good?
What if some things by chance misguided were,
Which they have now rebelliously withstood?
They never will proceed with that despight
To wracke the state, and to confound the right.

Nor doe I thinke that Bullingbrooke can be
So blind ambitious to affect the crowne,
Hauing himfelfe no title, and doth fee
Others, if you should faile, must keepe him downe;
Besides the Realme, though mad, will neuer gree
To have a right succession overthrowne,
To raise confusion vpon them and theirs
By prejudicing true and lawfull heires.

And

fia,

baA

Of his attempts, or with remorfe of mind, and good Or elfe distrusting secret practises, and appoint A He would be glad his quarrell were resigned. So that there were some orderly redresses and Mand In those disorders which the Realme did find:

And this I thinke he now sees were his best molder. Since farther actions farther but wheelt would have

And for the impossibility of peace side and W.

And reconcilement which my Lords objects: wo I I thinke when doying injury shall cease on and 10 (The cause pretended) then surcease the effects and Time and some other Actions may increase it and W. As may divert the thought of these respects; doin! W. Others law of forgetting injuries the manage of the forgetting injuries. The manage of the forgetting injuries.

And for his oath my Lord I thinke in conscience.

True honour would not so be found vntrue, baild of Nor spot his bloud with such a sowle offence minus!

Against his soule, against his God and you to grad O Our Lord sorbid that ever with the expence god host Of heaven and heavenly joies that shall insue, and of Mortality should buy this little breath more sting of T indure the horror of eternall death, including you

And therefore as I thinke you fafely maie
Accept this proffer, that determine shall
All doubtfull courses by a quiet waie;
Needfull for you fit for them, good for all:
And here my sou raigne to make longer stay
T'attend for what you are vnsure will fall
May slippe th'occasion and incense their will,
For seare thats wiser then the truth doth ill.

Thushe perswades even of a zealous mind,
Supposing men had spoken as they ment,
And vnto this the king likewise inclinde
As wholy vnto peace and quiet bent,
And yeelds himselfe to th' earle, goes, leaves behind
Safety, Scepter, honor, government:
For gone, all's gone, he is no more his owne;
And they rid quite of seare, he of the crowne.

A place there is where proudly raifd there stands.

A huge aspiring rocke neighbou'ring the skies.

Whose surly brow imperiously commands.

The sea his bounds that at his proud seet lies:

And spurnes the waves that in rebellious bands.

Assault his Empire and against him rise:

Vnder whose craggy government there was and a standard of the standard

And

THE SECOND BOOKE,

石艺

And here in hidden cliffes concealed lay

A troope of armed men to intercept

The vnsuspecting king, that had no way

To free his foote that into danger stept:

The dreadfull Ocean on th' one side lay,

The hard-incrocking mountaine th' other kept,

Before him he beheld his hatefull soes;

Behind, him traiterous enemies inclose.

Enuiron'd thus the Earle begins to cheere
His all-amased Lord by him betraide:
Bids him take courage, ther's no cause of seare,
These troopes but there to guard him safe were laid:
To whom the king: what needs so many here?
This is against your oth my Lord he said:
But now he sees in what distresse hee stood,
To strine was vaine, t'intreat would do no good.

And therefore on with carefull harthe goes
Complaines (but to himself) sighes, grieues & freats,
At Rutland dines, though feedes but on his woes,
The griefe of mind hindred the minde of meats:
For forrow, shame and feare, skorne of his foes,
The thought of what hee was and what now threats;
Then what he should, and now what he hath done,
Musters confused passions all in one.

That miscrable night he comes convaying and blood?

That miscrable night he comes convaying and blood?

Poorely provided, poorely followed, when I sid!

Vincourted, vinespected, vinobayd: an bus bod of where if vincertaine sleepe but hoovered av guine?

Ouer the drooping cares that heavy weight, in bus hold.

Millions of figures fantasic presents will adversal and and a North and North at forrow, wakened griefe augments.

His new missortune makes deluding sleepes
Say twas not so, false dreames the truth deny:
Wherewith he starts: seeles waking cares do creepe
Vpon his soule, and gives his dreame the lie:
Then sleepes againe, and then againe as deepe
Deceits of darknes mocke his misery:
So hard belien dwas forrow in heryouth
That he thinks truth was dreames, & dreames were

The morning light presents vato his view in a Walking vpon a turret of the place, which to true; The truth of what he sees is prou'd too true; A hundred thousand men before his face which thicker drew. And more to aggravate his sowled sigrace, Those he had wrongd or done to them dispight As if they him obrayd, came first in sight.

4.2

There might he fee that falls for fworms ville cir.
Those shambles agents of virlawfull lust, and main and this Pandars, Parasitis, people vintrue now viscos?
To God and man, vinworthy any trust: v, bernoon?
Pressing vinto that sortune that was intrested and read?
And with which thing saces form of thrust bedress.
As those that live in sun-shine of delights, to snoill!
And flie the winter when affliction lights.

There he beheld how humbly diligent wantie! I New adulation was to be at hand, he had a sweet? How ready Falfnood stept, how mimbly went want. We have pickthanke Flattery and prevents command. We saw the great obay, the grane consent, good field? And all with this new-raised Aspirer stand, he sais so a Which when he saw and in his forrow waid delined? Thus out of griefe vnto himselfe he said.

Spectator of that act my selfe have plaid, and the That act of rule which now vpon thy hand. This wavering mutability hath laid:

But Cosen, know the faith of this false land.

Stands sworne to me, that faith they have betraid. Is mine, tis mine the rule, thou dost me wrong.

T vsurpe the government I held so long.

And

When thou halt but tide what I have found,
Thou mailt repent thaughought comand to deare.
When thou thalt find on what unquiet ground and to deare.
When thou thalt find on what unquiet ground and the Greatnes doth standy that stands to high in seare of the Where infinite occasions do confound and the Where infinite occasions do confou

Inriching finde, with flore, and vice with gaine deady.

By my diffrace, fee what you get thereby o shome. It is raife the ball, considering goddoomptained with To raife the ball, considering goddoomptained with These vipers spoiled be wombe wherein they lie, by And haue but implidence a grace to gaine, and, alo A But bodies and bold browes no mindes within adW But hinde of ill, that knowes but how to find a winh.

And for the good which now do take thy pare?
Thou maifte reloyee, for the others land gladed and I To thinke they may intime likewife fubuart quant I The expectation which of the enen had so years to all the When thou shalt find how difficult languare guised by A It is to rule and please the good and bad a last add to Y And seele the grievance of this fatall fort, and no Y Which still are horne for courtain made in courtain A More

THE SECOND BOOKET

62

52

More griefe had said: when lothe Duke he saw
Entring the Caftle come to parle there, when up AT
Which makes him presently from thence withdraw?
Into a fitter place some other where those senteend
His fortune now inforst an yeelding awe that enably
To meete him, who before in humble scare to get and
Would have beene glad thave staid, and to prepare
The grace of audience, with attendant cared whom?

The Duke when come in presence of his king, Whether the sight of maiestie did breed in anidatal Remorse of wrong which renerence did bring, my a Or whether but to formalize his doed, dan aliero? He kneeles him down courn at his entering, wat of Rose, kneeles againe (for crast will still exceed) but a When as the king approchaput off his hood bod and And welcome him, though wished him little good and

To whom the Duke thus faid: my Lord I know
That both inlockt for and vnient vnto all a should
I have prefumed to come hither now; and admin of
But this your wrong and rigor draue me to, que and I
And being come I purpose now to shew and work
You better how to rule, and what to doe: all a should
You have had time too much to worke our ill, who have
But now redresse is planted in our will and list do have

As you shall please deare cosin said the king,
You have me in your powre, I am content
And I am pleased, if my disgrace may bring
Good to my countrey which I ever ment:
But yet God grant your course held in this thing
Cause not succeeding ages to repent.
And so they left: the Duke had hast to go,
It was no place to end the matter so.

66

Straight towards London in this heate of pride
The Duke sets forward as they had decreed,
With whom the Captine King constraind must ride,
Most meanely mounted on a simple steed:
Degraded of all grace and ease beside,
Thereby negled of all respect to breed;
For th' ouer-spreading pompe of prouder might
Must darken weaknes and debase his sight.

Approaching nere the Citty he was met
With all the sumptuous shewes ioy could deuise,
Where new-desire to please did not forget
To passe the viual pompe of sormer guise;
Striuing applause as out of prison let,
Runnes on beyond all boundes to nouelties:
And voice and hands and knees and all do now
A straung deformed forme of welcome show.

K

And

baA.

And manifold confusion running greetes (nere: Shootes, cries, claps hands, thrusts, strives and presses Houses impourisht were t'inrich the streetus, Ibak And streetes left naked that vnhappy were or hood Plac'd from the fight where ioy with wonder meets, Where all of all degrees striue to appeare: Where divers speaking zeale, one murmure findes In vndiftinguisht voice to tell their mindes. on and il

He that in glorie of his fortune fate, Admiring what he thought could neuer be, Did feele his bloud within falute his state, dans And lift vp his rejoicing foule to fee mylonsom fold So manie hands and harts congratulate o believed Th'aduancement of his long-desir'd degree: When prodigall of thankes in paffing by the in the He refalures them all with cheerefull eie . shab hul

Behind him all alcofe came penfine on oig A The vnregarded king, that drooping went Alone, and but for spight scarce lookt ypon in another Judge if he did more enuy or laments verlielle of O what a wondrous worke this daie is done; girling? Which the image of both fortunes doth prefent, and In th' one to shew the best of glories face, who white In th' other worse then worst of all disgrace, man A Now

Mow I sabell the young afflicted Queene, of Whose yeares had never show dher but delights. Nor louely eies before had ever seene
Other then smiling ioies and ioy sull sights:
Borne great, marcht great, liv'd great and ever beene
Partaker of the worlds best benefits,
Had plac'd her selfe, hearing her Lord should passe
That way where shee vnseene in secret was.

Sicke of delay and longing to behold

Her long mist loue in scarefull icoperdies,

To whom although it had in sort beene told

Of their proceeding, and of his surprize,

Yet thinking they would never be so bold

To lead their Lord in any shamefull wise,

But rather would conduct him as their king,

As sceking but the states reordering.

And forthshee looks: and notes the formost traine And grieues to view some there she wisht not there, Seeing the chiefe not come, staies, lookes againe, And yet she sees not him that should appeare:

Then backe she stands, and then desires was faine. Againe to looke to see if he were nere, At length a glittring troupe farre off shee spies, Perceiues the thronge and heares the shoots & cries.

THE SECOND BOOKE.

Lo yonder now at length he comes (saith shee)

Looke my good women where he is in sight:

Do you not see him? yonder that is hee

Mounted on that white courser all in white,

There where the thronging troupes of people bee,

I know him by his seate, he sits s' vpright:

Lo now he bows: deare Lord with what sweet grace:

How long haue I longd to behold that sace?

O what delight my hart takes by mine eie?

I doubt me when he comes but something neare
I shall set wide the window: what care I
Who doth see me, so him I may see cleare?
Thus doth salse ioy delude her wrongfully
Sweet lady in the thing she held so deare;
For nearer come, sheefindes shee had mistooke,
And him shee markt was Henrie Bullingbrooke.

Then Envie takes the place in her sweet eies.

Where forrow had prepard her selfea feat, (tife, And words of wrath from where complaints should Proceed from egar lookes, and browes that threat:

Traytor saith shee: It thou that in this wife

To braue thy Lord and king art made so great?

And have mine eies done vnto me this wrong

To look on thee? for this staid I so long?

O haue they grac'd a periur'd rebell so?

Well for their error I will weepe them out,

And hate the tongue defilde that praisde my so,

And loath the minde that gaue me not to doubt:

O haue I added shame vnto my woe?

Ile looke no more; Ladies looke you about,

And tell me if my Lord bee in this traine,

Least my betraying eies should erre againe.

And in this passion turnes her selfe away:
The rest looke all, and carefull note each wight;
Whilst she impatient of the least delay
Demaunds againe, and what not yet in sight?
Where is my Lord? what gone some other way?
Imuse at this, O God graunt all go right.
Then to the window goes againe at last
And sees the chiefest traine of all was pass.

And sees not him her soule desir'd to see,
And yet hope spent makes her not leaue to looke,
At last her loue-quicke eies which ready be,
Fastens on one whom though shee neuer tooke
Could be her Lord: yet that sad cheere which he
Then shewd, his habit and his wofull looke,
The grace he doth in base attire retaine,
Cause her she could not from his sight refraine.

What

What might he beshe said that thus asone of O Rides pensiue in this vniuerfall ioy: Some I perceiue as well as we doe mone, All are not pleased with enery thing this day, so lon A It maie be he laments the wronge is done a lound O Vnto my Lord, and grieues as well he may, alor all Thenhe is some of ours, and we of right and let ba A Must pitty him, that pitties our sad plight. d van 1 so 1

But stay, ift not my Lord himselfe I see and hard In truth if twere not for his base araie, I verily should thinke that it were he; And yet his basenes doth a grace bewray: Yet God forbid, let me deceiued be; O be it not my Lord although it may: And let desire make vowes against desire,

And let my fight approue my fight a liar. It and I A

Let me not see him, but himselfe, a king; a bal For so helestme, so he did remoue: que con to von A This is not he, this feeles some other thing, of the A passion of dislike or els of loue: w no ro application O yes tishe, that princely face doth bring od blio The euidence of maiestie to proue : laid worth north That face I have conferr'd which now I fee Dang of I With that within my hart, and they agreed and hus ? Thus

What

Thus as shee stoode assured and yet in doubt, I
Wishing to see, what seene she grieud to see,
Hauing beliefe, yet saine would be without;
Knowing, yet striuing not to know twas he:
Her hart relenting, yet her hart so stout
As would not yeeld to thinke what was, could be:
Till quite condemnd by open proofe of sight
Shee must confesse or esse denie the light.

For whether loue in him did sympathize
Or chance so wrought to manifest her doubt,
Euen iust before, where she thus secret prize,
He staies and with cleare face lookes all about:
When she : his ô too true, I know his eies
Alas it is my owne deare Lord, cries out:
And with that crie sinkes downe vpon the flore,
Abundant griese lackt words to ytter more.

Sorrow keepes full possession in her soule,

Lockes him within, laies up the key of breath,

Raignes all alone a Lord without controule

So long till greater horror threatnethe

And euen in daunger brought, to loose the whole

H is forst come forth or else to stay with death,

Opens a sigh and lets in sence againe,

And sence at legth gives words leave to complaine.

Then

THE SECOND BOOKE.

86

Then like a torrent had beene stopt before,
Teares, sighes, and words, doubled togither flow,
Confusely striuing whether should do more
The true intelligence of griefe to show:
Sighes hindred words, words perisht in their store,
Both intermixt in one together grow:
One would do all, the other more then's part
Being both sent equall agents from the hart.

At length when past the first of sorrowes worst,
When calm'd confusion better forme affords
Her hart commands her words should past out first,
And then her sighes should interpoint her words;
The whiles her eies out into teares should burst,
This order with her sorrow she accords,
Which orderles all forme of order brake,
So then began her words and thus she spake.

O dost thou thus returne againe to mee?

Are these the triumphs for thy victories?

Is this the glory thou dost bring with thee

From that vnhappy Irish enterprise?

O haue I made so many vowes to see

Thy safe returne, and see thee in this wise?

Is this the lookt for comfort thou dost bring,

To come a captiue that wentst out a king?

And

And yet deare Lord though thy vngratefull land Hathleft thee thus, yet I will take thy part, I do remaine the same under thy hand, died world? Thou still dost rule the kingdome of my hart; If all be loft, that government doth fland! block o And that shall never from thy rule depart: And so thou be, care not how thou be, Let greatnes goe, fo it goe without theel varono /

And welcome come, how so vnfortunate, I will applaud what others dodifpife, minima A I loue thee for thy selfe not for thy state, in second More then thy felfe is what without thee, lies ; in W Let that more go, if it be in thy fate, vin sin tad 10 1 And having but thy felfe it will fuffize: flomes daily I married was not to thy crowne but thee, amos of And thou without a crowne all one to mee.

But what doe I heere lurking idlie mone And waile a part and in a fingle part BlodwanozA Make seuerall griefe which should be both in one, The touch being equal of each others hart? Ahno sweete Lord thou must not mone alone, alW For without me thou art not all thou art and blue de Nor my teares without thinc are fullie teares, mul For thus ynjoyn de fortow but halfe appeares. di

Straight

Ioine

THE SECOND BOOKE, T

92

Then forth shee goes a close concealed way

As grieuing to be seene not as shee was;

Laborst' attaine his presence all shee maie,

Which with most hard a doe was brought to passe:

For that night vaderstanding where he laie

With earnest treating she procur'd her passe

To come to him. Rigor could not deny

Those teares, so poore a suite or put her by.

As one whose former fortune was his shame, who had Loathing the obraiding eie of anie one and all had Mark that whim once and knowes him not the same:

When having given expresse commaund that none Should presse to him, yet hearing some that earne?

Turnes angerly about his grieued eies was you to Mark the When lo his sweet afflicted Queenche spies.

Straight cleeres his brow & with a borrowed smile What my dere Queene, ô welcome deare he saies? And striuing his owne passion to beguile And hide the sorrow which his eie betraies, (while, Could speake no more but wrings her hands the And then (sweet lady) and againe he staies:

Th' excesse of ioy and sorrow both affords
Affliction none, or but poore niggard words.

Shee that was come with a refolued hart
And with a mouth full stoor'd, with words welchose,
Thinking this comfort will I first impart
Vnto my Lord, and thus my speech dispose:
Then thus ile say, thus looke, and with this art
Hide mine owne forrow to relieve his woes,
When being come all this prou'd nought but winde,
Teares, lookes, and sighes doe only tell her minde.

Thus both stood silent and consused so,
Their eies relating how their harts did morne
Both bigge with sorrow, and both great with woe
In labour with what was not to be borne:
This mighty burthen wherewithall they goe
Dies vndeliuered, perishes vnborne;
Sorrow makes silence her best oratore
Where words may make it lesse not shew it more.

But

THE SECOND BOOKE

98

Buthe whom longer time had learn'd the art
T'indure affliction as a viuall touch:
Straines forthhis wordes, and throwes difinay apart
To raise vp her, whose passions now were such
As quite oppress her ouerchardged hart,
Too small a vessell to containe so much,
And cheeres and mones, and sained hopes doth
As if himselse belieu'd, or hop'd the same.

And now the while these Princes forrowed,

Forward ambition come so nere her ende,

Sleepes not nor slippes th' occasion offered

T'accomplish what it did before intende:

A parlament is foorthwith summoned

In Richards name, whereby they might pretend

A forme to grace disorder and a shew

Of holie right, the right to ouerthrow.

Ah could not Maiestie bee ruined and and But with the scarefull powre of her ownename?

And must abuse obedience thus be led

With powrefull titles to consent to shame?

Could not consult on be established to the same?

But forme and order must consume the same?

Must they who his authority did hate, and would be retyled by the state?

Or-

For

LOI

Order, how predominant art thoul and line of That if but only thou pretended art; and idea and How from deceiu'd mortality doth bowers in It.

To follow thine as still the better partitude similar of the strength of the strength of the line of th

So ill did they that in this formall course do I Sought to establish a deformed right:
Who might as well esteed it by force, (might:
But that men hold it wrong what's wrought by the Offences vrg d in publique are made worse, word of The shew of institute aggranates despight of midels of Themultitude that looke not to the cause and and Rest satisfied, so it be done by lawes.

And now doth envie articles obiect is a minor Ofrigor, malice private favourings, in value all W Exaction, riot, fallbood and neglect; and a managed by kings:

Crimes done, but not to b' answered by kings:

Which subjectes maie complaine but not correct;

And all these faults which Laveaster now brings and Against a king, must be his owne when he may a subject to the law of the law

L 3.

Vроп

TOT

104

And publish in these articles abrodes ino and a rad?

All th' errors of his youth were here comprised wolf.

Calamitic with objective to lode: as anid well of of.

And more complication published dispiding under all the Libels, inuectives, rayling rimes were fowed visupin I.

Among the sulgar, to prepare his fall of monimist.

With more applause and good consent of all, lis wolf.

Whil'st priviled g'd with darknes and the night, wo?

Whil'st priviled g'd with darknes and the night, wo?

Doth live secure thimselfe of others seard, in only

But if by chance discovered in the light an and and

O how each little soule with enuy stirr day sounds

Cals him to instice, veges him with spights went and

Summons the seathered stockes of all the wood of a

To come to scorne the tyrant of their blood in the st

So fares this king layd open to diffrace a bad.
Whilst every mouth full of reprochanaies, and to the And every base detractor in this case.
Vppon the advantage of missortune plaies:
Downe-falling greatnes vrged on a pace different water.
Was followed hard by all disgracefull water.
Now in the point to accelerate an end with thing A Whilst misery had no meanes to desend.

Vpon

OIG7

So hay nous made, inforft, and vrgd fo hard, othe of He was adjugd white for government od to motold And of all regall power and rule debarrid: nominal For who durit contradict the Dukes intent, of 19910. Or if they durit should patiently be heard in many bank. Defire of change, old wrongs, new hopes, freshife are Being far the major part, the cause must be are sill.

Yet must we thinke that some which saw the course
The better sew, who in passion made not blinds but A
Stood carefull lookers on with sad commotiscents
Amazid to see what he adlong rage designed who A
And in a more considerate discoursed a side in o tust
Of tragical enemts thereof deninds of nonline
Of tragical enemts thereof deninds of nonline
And did or might their grieved harts to base in but A
Veter their for rowes in like termes as the sed and to H

What dissolute proceedings hadeweihered To what with monstrous vnexampled insolence and of the With monstrous vnexampled insolence and of the Durst subjects ever here or any where or and anised Thus impiously presume so sowie offence and offence

bnA

TIO

O fame conceale and doe not carry word of V
To after-comming ages of our shame; and not of Blot out of bookes and rase out of Record as a wold.

Blot out of bookes and rase out of Record as a wold.

All monuments memorials of the same allaho ban A.

Forget to tell how we did lift our sword, ub only not.

And envious idle accusations frame shub years in O.

Against our lawfull sour saigne, when we ought in O.

His end and our release haue staid not sought in S.

And time might well have cur'd what was amisse; IT Since all these faults fatall to greatnes are, a book. And worse describes have not been punishe thus, A But ô in this the heavens we feare prepare and but A Consusion for our sinness as well as his, a lasing and O And his calamity beginneth our; and man o his but A For he his owne, and we abuse his powre and year.

Thus grieued they when to the king were lent
Certaine that might persuade and vrge him on M
To leave his crowne, and make with free consent M
A voluntation resignation, may any another mis M
Seeing he could no other way prevent soid in the G
The daunger of his owne consustion, more and T
For not to yeeld to what seare would constraine, T
Would barre the hope of life that did remained back
And

े गा 3

And yet this scarce could worke him to consent
To yeeld up that so some men hold so deare a dead
Why let him take (said he) the government, a said.
And let me yet the name, the title beare; ried to any
Leaue me that shew and swill be content, never both.
And let them rule and governe without seare; wo deare wo deare we deare wo deare wo deare wo deare we deare we

Let meliold that, I aske no other good: It but A
Nay that I will hold, Henrie docthy worft, or not sill.
For ere I yeeld, my crowne ile look my bloud, or it.
That bloud than thall make the and thine accurited.
Thus resolute a while he firmely stood, and balg but A
Till loue of life and seare of being for the lot as we of the will be and feare of being for the lot as we of the will be and feare of this minde, will be or a
Vanquisht the innated valour of his minde, will be or a
And hope and friends, so wrought that he resigned. He

The Duke withall the Peeres attended on a solvoll A. To take his offer with his free confent, it is a connect in a connect

Deckt with the crowne in princely robes that days. The Like as the dead in other landes are ferminally why let him the graues in all their best arrays and let me was a land with the good did him this ornament, means and let me the way of the brought he must not be are away of him the buries there his glory and his name of the property of the land of the way of the land of the

Let zersift election by of the felt are and the control of the legical of the legical that legical work of the legical of the legical description of the legical description of the legical description of the legical o

Then to the bis dibiects all in general bit of and The Duke with will be be and quites of other and scaling the sounces in the state of the bis of the bis of the bis refuging by the state of the bis refuging the bits of the bis state of the bis of the bis state of the bis of

Tis said with his owne hands he gaue the crowne To Lancaster, and wisht to God he might Haue better joy thereof then he had knowne, And that his powre might make it his by right: And furthermore he crau'd of all his owne But life to live apart a private wight; The vanity of greatnes he had tride And how vnfurely standes the foote of pride.

This brought to passe the lords returne with speed T'acquaint the Parlament with what is done, Where they at large publisht the kings owne deed And manner of his relignation: When Canterbury vigothem to proceed Forthwith vnto a new clection, Share anone is the Bifton of And Henry make his claime both by discent And refignation to the government

Who there with full and generall applause Is ftraight proclaimd as king and after crownd, The other cleane rejected by the lawes, As one the Realmehad most viworthy found. And yet ô Lancaster I would thy cause Abandant Had had as lawfull and as fure a ground As had thy vertues, and thy glorious worth For Empire borne, for Government brought forth: Then M 2. noM

Her fieldes engrain'd with bloud, her rivers dide of With purple streaming wounds of her owne rage, Her fieldes engrain'd with bloud, her rivers dide of With purple streaming wounds of her owne rage, Her feene her Princes slaine, her Peeres distroides a Then had st not thou deare country come to wage A Warre with thy selfe, nor those afflictions tride of the Of all-consuming discord here so long, and the Too mighty now against thy selfe too strong.

123

About this quarrell, fatall to our land,
Haue beene referred with glory to have brought
Nations and kingdomes vnder our commaund:
So should all that thy sonne and thou had got,
With glorious praise have still beene in our hand,
And that great worthy last of all thy name
Had joind the westerne Empire to the same.

124

Th'admired glory of the earth, hereby
Haue had all this nere bordring world to bow
To her immortalized maiestie:
Then proud Iberus Lord not seeking how
Tattaine a sale-conceined Monarchie,
Had kept his barraine boundes and not have stood
In vaine attempts tinrich the seas with bloud.

Nor

Nor interpold his greedy intedling hands on A

In other mens affaires a advance his owne, in income.

Nor tyrannifd ouer to manie landes grad a bad fibal I

From late obscurity to mighty growne: again of yell

But we with our vindaunted conquering bandes lod W

Had lent our Enfignes vinto landes with nowne, in yell

And now with more audacious force began sloth of I

To march against the carebs-terror Occaminate and but A

126

Where thou (O worldy Ess.) whose deare blood
Reserved from these sad times to honour ours, lots?
Shoulds have conducted Armies and now stood.
Against the strength of all the Easterne Power: 100 V.
There should the valiant hand perform destar good.
Against the barbarisme that all denoures, loss of the redeemed Easts because I.
That all the states of the redeemed Easts because I.
Might three admire, and glorisie thy birth good and I.

The noe goight thy yator haud brought in despite to Electrical and you would be a common and you would be and go you had famely a quark of all thy deedes and glory of the famely a quark of all that which by her powre, and by thy might nive you had the their words and the remnoral of an arrest up and the made thee wondred here had mir d'a farrest up a the Mercury of peace, the Mercury of warre, and a should be a farrest up a fire of warre.

M 3.

And

Nor in a calment of the property of the proper

Nordiad Inhenatiolitary brodke mo) words and Where though the fer in debut descents of the fer in debut debut descents of the fer in debut deb

Against the barbari residuation of their fathers crimes and fining A.

But rather a more glorious subjects tooke up the part of the barbari residual ting rimes a register in cuerlas ting rimes a rimes a register in cuerlas ting rimes a rimes

The facred glories of Etazaber worth from death, M

And likewise builded for your great designes and O you two worthies bewties of our state of llamand. Immortall combes of vaconsuming lines about had had To keepe your holic deedes inviolates about had led You in whose actions yet the image shines to said the Of ancient honorineers, worne out of date builded You that have vertue into sashion brought hand had In these neglected times respected nought.

M 3. And

But

But whither am I carried with the thought
Of what might have beene, had not this beene fo?
Of facred Fury how was I thus brought
To speake of glory that must tell of wo?
These acted mischieses cannot be vnwrought
Though men be pleased to wish it were not so.
And therefore leave sad Muse th' imagin'd good,
For we must now returne againe to bloud.

But whither am I carried with the thought
Of what might have beene, had not this beene for
Of acred Fury how was I thus brought
To speake of glory that must tell of wo?
These acted mischieses cannot be rows ought
Though men be pleased to wish it were not so.
And therefore leave sad Might imagin'd good,
For we must now returne againe to bloud.

THE AROUMENT OF THE THIRD BOOKE.

Henry the fourth the Crowne of ablified. I A

The Lords that white Glofters death confent,
Degraded due rebell, are vanquished:
King Richard unto Pointret Castle sent
Is muri bered there. The Porcies making head

A gainst the king receive the punishment:

And in the end a tedious troublous raigne

A grievous death concludes with care, and paine.

Now rifen is that bead, by which did spring (rights;
The birth of two strong heads, two crownes, two
That monstrous shape that afterward did bring in I
Desorm'd consuston to distracted wights a school
Now is attain'd that dearely purchas'd thing of man
That fild the world with lamentable sights:
And now attain'd all care is how to frame in out attain
Meanes to establish, and to hold the same.

N

Striuing

THE THIRD BOOKE.

Of his weake cause, in apt-abused mindes,
He deckes his deed with colours of deceit
And ornaments of right, which now he findes:
Succession, conquest, and election straight
Suggested are, and prou'd in all three kindes:
More then inough he findes, that findes his might
Hathforce to make all that he will haue, right.

All these he hath when one good would suffize. The worlds applause, and liking to procure, But who his owne cause makes doth still deuise. To make too much to have it more then sure: Feare casts too deepe, and ever is too wise. The doubtfull can no vivall plots indure: These selfe-accusing titles all he had Seeking to make one good of manie bad.

Like foolish he that feares, and faine would stop
An inundation working on apace,
Runs to the breach, heapes mighty matter vp,
Throwesindigested burthens on the place,
Loades with huge waights, the outside and the top,
But leaves the inner parts in seeble case and a live.
Thinking for that the outward formes eenes strong
Tis sure inough, and may continue long to won but and only blon or bus, diddads or some But

Strining

But when the vinderworking waves come on A
Scarching the fecrets of vinfenced waies, disposition of the full maine Ocean following hard vipono mount of the full maine Ocean following hard vipono mount of the full maine Ocean following hard vipono mount of the full maine Ocean following hard vipono mount of the full maine ocean following hard vipono mount of the Profession that idle frame, skotning such states; I Prostrates that frustrate paines as if not done, so has fully labors plaies, belonged by the Whilst he perceives his error, and doth finde out the His ill proceeding contrary to kind as an illegation of the His ill proceeding contrary to kind as an illegation of the His ill proceeding contrary to kind as an illegation of the His ill proceeding contrary to kind.

And wrong-contriued labors at the last, And IIA
Whilst working time or lustice vadermines
The seeble ground-worke crast thought laid so fast:
Then when out-breaking vengeance vacombines W
The ill-ioyad plots so fairely ouereast, was a similar turnes up those strong pretended heapes of showes
And all these weake illusions ouerthrowes.

But well he thought his powre made al seem plain,
And now this coronation he proceedes, he busies
Which in most sumptuous fort (to intertaine benne).
The gazing vulgar whom this error feedes) glosno
Is furnisht with a stately glorious traines and home.
Wherein the formet kings he far exceeds to home. A
And all the world, and turne the thought ho
Of what, and how twas done to what is wrought ho not not.

And

And that he might on many props repose and He strengths his owne, and who his part did take. New officers, new counsellours he chose, and to those with this eldest sonne the Prince of Wales doth make, and His second Lordhigh Steward, and to those without Had hazarded their fortunes for his sake with A He gives them charge, as merites their desart, with Seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part, with the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part and the seeking all meanes to oppresse the adverse part and the seeking all meanes to oppresse the seeking all the seeking all meanes to oppresse the seeking all the

All th' officers, and judges of the states and judges of the states and judges of the states and half to disgrace, or els to death did bring how shirty. Lead by his owne, or by the peoples hate added and to Who euermore by nature mallicing how need to Their might whom not their vertues, but their state to Exalted hath, who when kings do what's naught to Because tis in their powre, tis thought their saut.

And plac'd for these such as were popular will Belou'd of him, and in the peoples grace, worth A Learned grave Shirley he makes Chauncellor, worth One of great spirit, worthy his worthy race. And Clifford he ordaines Lord Treasuror, with the A man whose vertues well deserved that places will Others to other roomes (whom people hold So much more lou'd how much they loathd the old) but A. Then

Then against those hestrictly doth proceeds?
Who chiefe of Glossers death were guilty thought, all (Not so much for the hatred of that deed) and all all the winder this pretext the meanes he sought, and all To ruine such whose might did much exceed has all His powre to wrong nor els could well be wrought?
Law, suffice, bloud, the zeale vinto the dead and all A Were on his side, and his drift shadowed.

li

Here manie of the greatest of the land of bal The Dukes of Surrey, Accused were of the act, strong proofes brought out excelent Amparle.
The Earles Which strongly were refell'd, the Lords all stand To cleere their cause most resolutely stouten and of Salisbu. The king perceiving what he tooke in hand and but After, the Bi-Shop of Care The Earles thuode range and be brought about solars and T lile, Sir The Deliftes to vige their death in anie wife, you lis both and other Respecting numbers strength, friends, and allies. parties atenfed.

Nor was it time now in his tender raigne in ya.

And infant-young-beginning government, and for the first of the different ships of the different ships.

The mighty wight and please the different ships.

New kings do feare, when old courts farther straine, Establish states to all things will consent; (d) only the must dispense with his will, and their crime, and seeke to oppresse and we are them out with time.

N 3.

D3 463

Yethor to fedmé bit to have lo mething dont!

In what he could not as he would ested, shie of the people that beginn to have the people that beginn a bound of his people that beginn a bound of his people that the people that beginn a bound of his people that the people that beginn a bound of his people that beginning the people the people that beginning the people that beginning the people the people that beginning the people that beginning the people

And to abale the two high state of those more! I
That were accused, and lessen their degrees, which A

Authorite, Surry, Exceter, must lose any innomination of
The names of Dukes, their titles, dignities, reals of
And what socuer honour with it goess required and of The Earles their titles and their Signories, when the M

And all they gote in th' end of Richards raigne in of
Since Glossers death, they must restore agains and all

That great presumptive wealth, wheren they stands
For first hereby impourishing their state would of
He kils the meanes they might have to withstand to
Then equals them with other whom they hate would
Who (by their spoiles) are raised to hie command, of
That weake, and ennied if they should conspire most
They wracke themselves, and he hath his defire but
And

And by this grace which yet must be a grace?

As both they, and the world, are made believe, and the world, are made believe, and the world, are made believe, and the doth bimselse secure and them deface, and had a Thinking not rigor that which life doth guilt and W.

But what an error was it in this case that blorn it is a To wrong so many, and to let them live to me med?

But errors are no errors but by sate, b, a wood nead.

For oft the event make soule saults for tunated gyd.

What ever pleased the king but to propound; and Confirm a the crowne to him and to his seed, and And by their oth their due obedience bound: and And ôb'itsinne t'examine now this deed and all of How inst tis done and on how sure a ground? Whether that Court maie change due course or no Or ought the realme against the realme can doo!

That Richard should remaine for enermore and T Close-prisoner, least the realme might chace induce Some new revoluor lany fresh phones and blood? And that if any should such broile procure side yet By him or for him, be should die therefore about T Sorhar atalke of turnultiand a breath word any back Would serve him as his passing bell to death aims & Would serve him as his passing bell to death aims &

Thy holy voice to faue thy Princes bloud, diodal.

And freely check it this judgement and his foes, off
When all were had, yet thou dar it to be good and T

Be it invold that time may never lose and and would.

The memory how firme thy vertues it ody no wo T

When powre, diffrace, nor death could ought divart

Thy glorious tongue, thus to reueale thy hartoned.

Our Amentine, Retire, our holy hill; algroup and W This place, soule of our state, the Realmes best grace Doth priviled ge me speake what reason will: L.A. O let me speake my conscience in this case do bank Least sin of silence shew my hart was ill, and sin she wold. And let these walles witnes if you will not, and all W I do discharge my soule of this soule blot. I go to

Neuer shall this ploore breath of mine consent
That he that two and twenty yeeres hath raignd of the As lawfull Lord, and king by just discent, line aloo of Should here be judged incompetents it sale back.

By subjects two: Indgestincompetents it sale back.

To judge their king valawfully detained to mind of And value brought forth to plead his guiltles cause, Should be a mounted diberrie of lawes and blood.

Haue

Meanes

Haue you hot done inough blufh, blufhto thinke, Lay on your harts those hands; those hands too rash, Know that this flaine that's made doth farther finke Into your foules then all your blouds can wash, time! Leand with the mischiefe done and doe not linke 1 Sin unto fin, for heaven, and earth will dash hab back This ill accomplishe worke ere it belong, is a near For weakehe builds that fences wrong with wrong.

Stopt there was his too vehemet speech with speed, And he fent close to warde from where he stood: His zeale vntimely deem'd too much t'exceed The measure of his wit and did no good : " on toy 21 !! They refolute for all this doe proceed agit 194 9mo? Vnto that judgement could not be withflood: SunH The kinghad all he crau'd or could compell, And all was done we will not fay how well.

Now Muferelate a wofull accident ingozini And tell the bloudshed of these mighty Peeres Who lately reconcild, rest discontent, and was but Grieud with difgrace, remaining in their feares How enerseeming outwardly content, in a supply Yet th' inward touch that wounded honor beares Rests closely rankling and can find no ease Till death of one side cure this great disease.

Bewilly

THE THIND BOOKE.

49 loanes

26

By the Abbot now of Westminster is found,
Who secretly disliking Henries part
Inuites these Lords, and those he ment to sound,
Feasts them with cost, and drawes them on with art,
And darke, and doubtful questions doth propounds
Then plainer speakes, and yet vncertaine speakes,
Then wishes wel, then off abruptly breakes.

My Lords saith he, I feare we shall not finde 19012. This long-desired king such as was thought: d.b.A. But yethe may doe well: God turne his minde: aiH. Tis yet new daies: but ill bodes new and nought: If Some yet speed well: though all men of my kind IT. Haue cause to doubt; his speech is not forgot, on V. That Princes had toolsttle, we too much; bed published. God give him grace, but is ill trusting sach the but A.

This open-close, apparent darke discourse.

Drew on much speech, and every man replies, had And cuery man ads heat, and wordes insorce.

And vige out words, for when one man espies.

Anothers minde like his, then ill breedes worse, had out breakes all in th' end what closest lies, had out breakes all in th' end what closest lies, had out breakes all in th' end what closest lies, had being warme. Then are they most improvident of harme.

Bewray

Bewray they did their inward boyling spight T

Each stirring other to revenge their cause, who had a compared to the sight a stand T

Of that for sworne, that wrongs both land and lawes:

Another vowes the same of his minde tight and 10 T

A third t a point more nere the matter drawes, but A

Sweares if they would, he would attempt the thing.

To chaste the vsurper, and replace the inking.

Thus one by one kindling each others fire
Till all inflam'd they all in one agree,
All resolute to prosecute their ire,
Seeking their owne, and Countries cause to free:
And have his first that their bloud did conspire,
For no way else they said but this could be
Their wrong-detained honor to redeeme, (teeme.
Which true-bred bloud shoulde more then life es-

And let not this our new made faithles Lord
Saith Surry thinke, that we are left so bare
Though bare inough; but we will find a sword
To kill him with, when hee shall not beware:
For he that is with life and will but stoor'd,
Hath for reuenge inough, and needs not care,
For time will fit and furnith all the rest,
Let him but even attend, and doe his best.

2.

Then

Then of the manner how t' effect the thing Consulted was, and in the end agreed that a maske and common reuelling of the deed; Which should b' ordaind, they should performe the For that would be least doubted of the king and A And stress for their safety to proceed, and A The night, their number, and the suddaine act would dash all order, and protect their fact.

Besides they might vnder the faire pretence

Of Tilts and Turnements which they intend,
Prouide them horse, and armour for desence,
And all things else convenient for their end:
Besides they might hold sure intelligence
Among themselves without suspect to offend:
The king would think they sought but grace in court
Withall their great preparing in this fort.

A folemne oth religiously they make

By intermutuall vowes protesting there

This neuer to reueale; nor to for sake

So good a cause, for daunger hope, or seare:

The Sacrament the pledge of faith they take,

And every man uppon his sword doth sweere

By knighthood, honor, or what els should binde,

To assecure the more each others minde.

And when all this was done, and thought weld one And every one affures him good fuccesse, and and easie seemes the thing to every one that nought could crosse their plot or the suppresse. Yet one among the rest, whose mind not wonne With th' overweening thought of hot excesse, Nor headlong carried with the streame of will, Nor by his owne election lead to ill:

36

Sober, milde Blunt, whose learning, valor, wit
Had taught true iudgement in the course of things,
Knew daungers as they were, and th' humerous sit
Of ware-lesse discontent, what end it brings:
Counsels their heat with calme grave words, & sit
Words wel forethought that from experiece springs,
And warnes a warier carriage in the thing
Least blind presumption worke their ruining.

37

My Lords (faith he) I know your wisedomes such
As that of my aduise you have no need, the look
I know you know how much the thing doth touch
The maine of all your states, your bloud, your seed:
Yet since the same concernes my life as much
As his whose hand is chiefest in this deed,
And that my score must go as farre as his,
I thinke my tongue may speake what needfull is.

The

The thing we enterprize I know doth beare. A

Great possibility of good effect,

For that so many men of might there are that A

That venter here this action to direct:

Which meaner wights of trust, and credit bare of the Notso respected could not looker effect;

For none without great hopes will follow fuch to A Whose powre, and honor doth not promise much.

Besides this new, and doubtfull gouernment,
The wavering saith of people vaine, and light,
The secret hopes of many discontent,
The natural affection to the right,
Our lawfull sou raignes life, in prison pent,
Whom men begin to pitty now, not spight,
Our well laid plot, and all I must confesse
With our just cause doth promise good successe.

But this is yet the outward fairest side

Of our disseigne: within rests more of seare,

More dread of sad euent yet vndiscride

Then ô most worthy Lords I would there were:

But yet I speake not this as to deuide

Your thoughts from th'act, or to dismay your cheere,

Onely to adde vnto your forward will

A moderate seare to cast the worst of ill.

Dan-

You needs must grant, is great, and to be waigh'd
Before: least while we doe the deed protract
It be by any of our selves bewraid:
For many being privy to the fact
How hard it is to keepe it vnbetraid?
When the betrayer shall have grace and life
And rid himselfe of danger and of strife.

Yet many thrinke, which at the first would dare
And be the formost men to execute,
If the act, and motion at one instant were:
But intermission suffers men dispute
What dangers are, and cast with farther care
Cold doubt cauils with honor, skorneth same,
And in the end seare waighes down faith with shame.

Then in the act, what perils shall we finde

If either place, or time, or other course

Cause vsto alter th' order now assign'd?

Or that, then we expect things happen worse?

If either error, or a fainting minde,

An indiscrect amazement or remorse

In any at that instant should be found,

How much it might the act, and all consound?

After

After the deed the daungers are no lesse, and Least that our forwardnes not seconded about of By our owne followers, and accomplices also problems. Being kept backe or flow or hindered to the year yeard. The hastic multitude rush on t'oppressed your of Consused weakness there visuecored, at a back wolf. Or raise another head of that same race destrois Wolf.

T'auenge his death, and prosecute the case, bit has A.

And ô I could have witht another course and I nopen field thave hazarded my bloud, and in II But some are heere whose love is of that sorce and I are here whose love is of that sorce and I are higher than the work and is so that sorce and I are higher than the work and in the successe be good your course is good:

And ending well our honor then begins,

No hand of strife is pure, but that which wins.

This

This faid, a fad still silence held their minds

Vpon the searefull project of their woe,

But that not long ere forward fury finds

Incouraging perswasions on to go:

We must said they, we will, our honour bindes,

Our safety bids, our faithmust haue it so,

We know the worst can come, tis thought vpon,

We cannot shift, being in, we must goe on.

And on indeed they went, but ô not farre,

A fatall stop trauers their headlong course,

Their drift comes knowne, and they discoursed are,

For some of many will be false of sorce:

Aumarie became the man that all did marre

Whether through indiscretion, chance or worse,

He makes his peace with offring others bloud

And shewes the king how all the matter stood.

Then lo dismaid confusion all possest
The afflicted troupe hearing their plot discride,
Then runnes amazed distresse with sad vnrest
To this, to that, to flie, to stand, to hide:
Distracted terror knew not what was best
On what determination to abide,
At last despaire would yet stand to the sword,
To trie what friends would doe or fate assoord.

Then

THE THIRD BOOKE.

Then this then that mans and they craue, implore,
Post here for helpe, seeke there their followers:
Conjure the frendes they had, labor for more,
Sollicite all reputed sauorers,
Who Richards cause seem'd to affect before,
And in his name write, pray, send messengers;
To try what faith was left, if by this art
Anie would step to take afflictions part:

And some were sound, & some againe draw backe Vncertaine power could not it selfe retaine,
Intreat they may, autority they lacke,
And here, and there they march, but all in vaine:
With desp'rat course, like those that see their wracke Euen on the Rockes of death, and yet they straine
That death maie not them idly find t'attend
Their certaine last, but worke to meet their end.

And long they stand not ere the chiefe surprized Conclude with their deare bloud their tragedie:

And all the rest disperst, run some disguisd

To vnknowne costes, some to the shores do flie,

Some to the woodes, or whether searcaduisd,

But running from all to destruction hye,

The breach once made vpon a battered state.

Downe goes distresse, no shelter shroudes their fate.

Onow what horror in their foules doth grows!

What forrowes with their frendes, and nere allyes?

What mourning in their ruin'd houses now?

How many childrens plaints and mothers cryes?

How many wofull widowes left to bow do the house how the house their so fad disgraces what perisht families?

To sad disgraces what perisht families?

What heires of hie rich hopes their thought smust house to bace downe-looking pouerty and shame!

This flaughter, and calamitic forgoes and and Thy eminent destruction would king, borg and roll. This is the bloudie comet of thy woes manufactor. That doth fortell thy present ruyning: beloom and That doth fortell thy present ruyning: beloom and There was thy end decreed when these men rose in A And even with their, this act thy death didbring to M. Or hastened, at the least vponthis ground; so and M. Yet is not this, another had been found.

Kinges (Lordes of times and of occasions)

May take th'aduauntage, when, and how they lift,

For now the Realme with these rebellions

Vext, and turinoyld, was thought would not resist

Nor seele the wound, when like consustant of

Should by this meanes be stayd, as all men wist,

The cause being once cut off, that did molest,

The land should have her peace, and he his rest.

P 2.

THE THIRD BOOKE.

56

He knew this time, and yet he would not seeme
Too quicke to wrath, as if affecting bloud;
But yet complaines so far, that men might deeme
He would twere done, and that he thought it good;
And witht that some would so his life esteeme
As rid him of these seares wherein he stood:
And therewith cies a knight, that then was by,
Who soone could learne his lesson by his cie.

The man he knew was one that willingly aid!

For one good looke would hazard foule and all,

An instrument for any villanie,

That needed no commission more at all:

A great ease to the king that should hereby

Not need in this a course of instice call,

Nor seeme to wil the act, for though what's wrought

Were his own deed, he gricues should so be thought.

That tortrest both the doer and distrest,

For when a man hath done a wicked part,

O how he striues t'excuse to make the best,

To shift the fault, t' vnburthen his charg'd hart

And glad to finde the least surmise of rest:

And if he could make his seeme others fin,

O what repose, what ease he findes therein?

This

This knight, but o why should I call him knight Togiue impiety this reuerentstile, of base and for Title of honour, worth, and vertues right Should not be given to a wretch fo vile ? weid nog V O pardonme if I doe not aright, month of soles of Itisbecaufe I will not here defile ling and of ton effici. My vnstaind verse with his opprobrious name, And grace him fo to place him in the fame.

This caitife goes and with him takes eight more As desperatas himselfe; impiously bold sow a roll A Such villaines as he knew would not abhorre To execute what wicked at he would, along And haftels him downe to Pomfret where before The reftles king contaid, was laide in hold: (bring There would he do the deed he thought should To him great grace and fauour with his king.

Whether the soule receive intelligence gard O By her nere Genius of the bodies end, waid and and And so impartes a sadnesse to the sense wand and it Forgoing ruine whereto it dochtend an aslast and I Or whether nature elfe hatheonference mails sould With profound fleepe, and fo doth warning fend By prophetizing dreames what hurt is neere, And gives the heavie carefull hart to feare: 1001 How

P 3.

How cher fo it is, the now fad king adjust aid?

Toft here and there his quiet to confound, and of Peeles a straunge waight of fortowes gathering and V pon his trembling hart, and sees no ground blood?

Feeles sodayne terror bring cold shillering object O

Lists not to eat, still muses, steepes visiound, and sixt

His sences droope, his steedy eye vinquicke is show M

And much he ayles, and yet hee is not sicke.

After a weary well hydrig to paine mid as a readed a A

Out at a little grate his eyes he cast as senially day?

Vepon those bordering hills, and open plaine, and I

And viewes the towne, and sees how people past, a A

Where others libertic makes him complaineered I

The more his owne, and grieves his soule the more

Conferring captive-Crownes with freedome pore.

O happie man, saith hee, that lo I deed red and I W
Grazing his cattel in those pleasant field esbound v
O if he knew his good, how blessed hee required by A
That seeles not what lassification greatness yeeldessed
Other then what he is he would not bee, reducing to
Nor chaung his state with him that Scepters weildest
O thine is that true life, that is to live, restanding v
B
To rest secure, and not rise up to griede the sain by Mold

Thou sit st at home safe by thy quiet sire

And hear'st of others harmes, but seelest none;

And there thou telst of kinges and who aspire,

Who sall, who rise, who triumphs, who doe mone: A

Perhappes thou talkst of mee, and dost inquire.

Of my restraint, why here I live alone,

Oknow tis others sin not my desart,

And I could wish I were but as thou art.

Thrice-happie you that looke as from the shore
And have no venter in the wracke you see,
No sorrow, no occasion to deplore
Other mens travayles while your schoes sit free. It
How much doth your sweet restmake vs the more
To see our misery and what we beed the sold standard of the stand

But looke on mee, and note my troubled raigne,
Examine all the course of my vext life;
Compare my little ioyes with my long paine,
And note my pleasures rare, my sorrowes rise,
My childhood spent in others pride, and gaine,
My youth in daunger, farther years in strise,
My courses crost, my deedes wrest to the worst,
My honour spoild, my life in daunger sorst.

This is my state, and this is all the good
That wretched I have gotten by a crowne,
This is the life that costes men so much bloud
And more then bloud to make the same their owne,
O had not I then better beene t'have stood
On lower ground, and safely liu'd vnknowne,
And beene a heards man rather then a king,
Which inexperience thinkes so sweet a thing.

Dieckfan the EmpeO thou great Monarch, and more great therefore
For skorning that whereto vaine pride aspires,
Reckning thy gardens in Illinia more
Then all the Empire; took'st those sweet retires:
Thou well didst teach, that ô he is not poore
That little hath, but he that much desires:
Finding more true delight in that small ground
Then in possessing all the earth was found.

But what do I repeating others good look and To vexe mine owne perplexed foule the more?

Alas how should I now free this peore bloud.

And care-worne body from this state restore?

How should I looke for life or lively-hood.

Kept here distrest to die, condemnd before,

A sacrifice prepared for his peace.

That can but by my death have his release?

Arc

Are kings that freedom give themselves not free,
As meaner men to take what they maie give?

O are they of so fatalla degree

That they cannot discend from that and live?

A Valesse they still be kings can they not bee,

Nor maie they their autority survive?

Will not my yeelded crowne redeeme my breath?

Still am I fear'd? is there no way but death?

Scarce this word death had forrow vttered.

But in rusht one, and tels him how a knight
Is come from court, his name delivered.

What newes with him faid he that traiterous wight?

What more removes?must we be farther lead?

Are we not sent inough yet out of sight?

Or hath this place not strength sufficient

To guard ys in? or have they worse intent?

When as a fodaine and a strange dismay
Inforst them straine, who should go in before;
One offers, and in offring makes a stay:
Another forward sets and doth no more,
A third the like, and none durst make the way:
So much the horror of so vile a deed
In vilest mindes hinders them to proceed.

At length, as to some great assault the knight A
Cheeres up his fainting men all that he can, ment A
And valiantly their courage doth incite o your or O
And all against one weake unarmed mans your stall.
A great exployt worthy a man of might, world of the M
Much honour wretch therein thy valor wans much
Ah poore weake prince, yet men that presence scare
Which once they knew autoritie did beare. I malling

The face of maiestie to him well knowne; wanted W
Like Marine soldier at Minternum, heep a normal W
Stood still amazed his courage overthrowne; wanted W
The king seeing this, startes up from where he sate O
Out from his trembling hand his weapon gate up of

Thus even his foes that came to bring him death,
Bring him a weapon that before had none, and well.
That yet he might not idly loofe his breath of from I
But die reuengd in action not alone: bas, and to and
And this good chaunce that this much favoureth and
He flackes not, for he prefently speedes one, brids A
And Lion-like vponthe rest he slies, and add the mod
And here salles one, and there another lies and along all

AC

And

And up and downe he trauerfes his ground, Mand wardes a felling, blow, now strikes againe, and Then nimbly shiftes a thrust, then lendes a wound, Mand backe he gives, then rushes on amaine, and Mand His quicke and readie hand doth so confound to the sharefull beastes that source of them lies shain. And all had perish that poly and well burned and will burness and But for one act, that of greine to tell, you ministed to the shareful to the share share to tell.

This coward knight feeing with thame and feare
His men thus flaine and doubting his owneed, of
Leapes up into a chaire that lo was there, hand off
The whiles the king did all his courage bend no off
Against those fourd that now before him were, lw 10
Doubting not who behind him doth attendanted of
And plies his handes undanted, unaffeard as but A
And with good hart, and life for life he stird, our flord?

And whiles be this, and that, and each man's blow
Dotheye, defend, and thift, being laid to fore this?
Backward he beares for more advauntage now, ho
Thinking the wall would fafegardhim the more, ho
When lowith impious hand owicked thou, who o
That thamefull durft hor come to trike before, do T
Behind him gan't that would deadly wound, no ho
That laid that most sweet Prince flat on the ground.

On the point of the ground of the ground.

THE THIRD BOOKE,

82

Monster of men, o what hast thou here done nA Vnto an ogerpreffed innocent, anillal a zabraw woll Labring against so many, he but one, lideran again And one poore soule with care, with forrow spent? O could thy cies indure to looke vponus salaup zill Thy hands difgrace, or didft thou then relent? But what thou didft I will not here deuine and Is bank Nor straine my thoughts to enter into thine, while

But leave thee wretch vnto blacke infamie, in I To darke eternall horror, and difgrace, una norm zild The hatefull skorne to all posterity, or in av The our-cast of the world, last of thy race, world Of whose curst seed, nature did then deny it finis A To bring forth more her faire workes to deface: a And as asham'd to have produc'd that past She staies her hand, and makes this worst her last.

Therelies that comely body all imbrude wonA With that pure bloud, mixt with that fowle he shed: O that those sacred streames with such vile rude Vnhallowed matter should be mingled! O why was groffenes with fuch grace indude, nor W To be with that sweet mixture honoured? mail and T Or seru'd it but as some vile graue ordaind, Where an imbalmed corpes should be contained? Monftor

Those

Those faire distended simmes all trembling lay, Whom yet nor life nor death their owne could call, For life remou'd had not rid all away, And death though entring seas'd not yet on all. That short-tim'd motion (that some finish shall. The mour ceasing) yet a while doth stay, As th' organ sound a time survives the stop with Before it doth the dying notegive vp:

So holdes those organs of that goodly frame. The weake remaines of life a little space, But ah full soone cold death possest the same, Set are those sun-like cles, bloudlesse that sace, And all that comely whole a sump became, and All that fair forme which death could scarce disgrace Lies perisht thus, and thus vntimely fate. Hath finisht his most miserable state.

85

Is made the oblation for the others peacet and all beside
Now onely one, both name and all beside
Intirely hath, plurality doth cease:
He that remaines remaines unterriside
With others right; this day doth all release:
And henceforth he is absolutely king,
No crownes but one, this deed confirmes the thing.

And yet new Hydraes lo, new heades appeared
Tafflict that peace reputed then so sure, to young!
And gaue him much to do, and much to seare, to o!
And long and daungerous tumults did procure, and And those cuen of his chiefest followers were that T
Of whom he might presume him most secure, and T
Who whether not so gracid or so preserd agro that A
As they expected, these new factions stirds it are less.

The Percyes were the men, men of great might,
Strong in alliance, and in courage strong a leave of T hat thus conspire, under pretence to right in a sus.
The crooked courses they had suffered long as set
Whether their conscience used themor despight; A
Or that they saw the part they took awas wrong; IIA
Or that ambition hence odid them call, in the set III
Or others enuide grace, or rather all and minimum. III

What cause societies great, meanes good, this casion since I Their practise close, their faith suspected not, word Their states far off and they of wary with and domin! Who with large promises draw in the Scot made H. To ay de their cause, he likes, and yeeldes to it, have Not for the love of them or for their good, and back But glad hereby of meanes to shed our bloud. Then

And all in armies ynder a mightic head of the straind of Great Gundown, who long warr'd, and much attaind, Onen Sharp conflicts made, and many vanquished: 110 T Glender. With whom was Edmond Earle of March retaind 11 Being first his prisoner, now confedered, the best had a man the king much fear'd, and well he might may A Least he should looke whether his Crown stood right.

For Richard, for the quiet of the state, advertised
Before he tooke those frish warres in hand a tradit of Richard
About succession doth deliberate, and sid it guidad.
And finding how the certaine right did stand, ad tad!
With full consent this man did ordinate out next but.
The heyre apparent to the crowne and land; what I
Then judge if this the king might nevely touch, but.
Although his might were small, his right being much.

With these the Percyes them confederate, and T And as three heades they league in one intent, with A And instituting a Triumuirate boild not of any back. Do part the land in triple government: widous as also I Deuiding thus among themselves the state, from Trent and The Percyes should rule all the North from Trent and I And Glendowr Wales the Earle of March should be a Lord of the South from Trent; and thus they gree the I and of the South from Trent; and thus they gree the I are I ri a

Pretence of common good, the kings difgrace about A Doth fit their course, and draw the vulgarmind on To further them and aide them in this case to a qual the king they accuse for cruell, and vukind with the King they accuse for cruell, and vukind with the A periurde man that held all faith in skorne, and A Whose trusted other had others made for worne, and

Besides the odious detestable at the fact that a supplied a Making it his that so had will'd the fact the supplied A That he the doers did remunerate: work in him had And then such taxes daily doth exact the supplied A That were against the orders of the state, and soll and the And with all these or worse they him assaid the supplied at the Who late of others with the like pregaild.

Great

Great seemd the cause, and greatly to, did ad.
The peoples loue thereto these crimes rehearst.
I not manie gathered to the troupes they had had had many more do flocke from costs dispersion.

And many more do flocke from costs dispersion.

But when the king had heard these newes so bad, the Th'ynlookt for dangerous toyle more nearly perst.

For bett wards Wales t'appease those tumults there, H'is for'st diuert his course, and them for beare.

Not to give time vnto th'increasing rage
And gathering sury, forth he hastes with speed,
Lest more delay or giving longer age
To th'euill growne, it might the cure exceed:
All his best men at armes, and leaders sage
All he prepard he could, and all did need;
For to a mighty worke thou goest ô king,
To such a field that power to power shall bring.

There shall young Hotespur with a sury lead

Meete with thy forward sonne as sierce as he:

There warlike Worster long experienced
In forraine armes, shall come t'incounter thee:

There Donglas to thy Stafford shall make head:
There Vernon for thy valiant Blunt shalbe:
There shalt thou find a doubtfull bloudy day,
Though sicknesse keepe Northumberland away.

R 1. Who

The son to the Earle of Northuberland.

Who yet referu'd, though after quit for this,
Another tempest on thy head to raise,
As if still wrong reuenging Nemesis
Did meane t'assict all thy continuals dayes:
And yet this field he happely might misse
For thy great good, and therefore well he staies:
What might his force have done being joynd there
When that already gave so much to do?

(to,

The swift approch and vnexspected speed
The king had made vpon this new-raise force
In the vnconfirmed troupes much feare did breed,
Vntimely hindring their intended course;
The ioyning with the Welsh they had decreed
Was hereby stopt, which made their part the worse,
Northumberland with sorces from the North
Expected to be there, was not set forth.

100

And yet undaunted Hot four seeing the king.

So nere approach'd, leauing the worke in hand.

With sorward speed his forces marshalling,

Sets forth his farther comming to withstand:

And with a cheerfull voice incouraging.

By his great spirithis well im boldned band,

Bringes a strong host of firme resolved might,

And plac'dhis troupes before the king it sight.

This

This day (faith he) ô faithfull valiaum frendes, What euer it doth giue, shall glorie giuc: This day with honor frees our state, or endes obitA Our milery with fame, that still shall live, And do but thinke how well this day he spendes

That spendes his bloud his countrey to relieue: on T Our holie cause, our freedome, and our right, still Sufficient are to move good mindes to fight. In Just I

Besides th'assured hope of victory and somito? Calles on the bil wo mour fide in o solle? Against this weake-constrained companie, and bat A Whomforce & feare, not will, and loue doth guide Against a prince whose soule impietym vm no non I The heavens do have, the earth cannot abide, our I Our number being no leffe, our courage more, bath What need we doubt if we but worke therefore,

cra3 This faid, and thus resoluted even bent to charge Vpon the king, who well their order viewd And carefull noted all the formeat large ab or and Of their proceeding, and their multitude: 110 3 110 1 And deeming better if he could discharge moond A The day with fafetie, and some peace conclude, Great proffers sendes of pardon, and of grace 1811 If they would geeld, and quidtnes imbrace wood out

Rut R 2. But

THE THIRD BOOKE

1040

Rage against fury doth with speed prepare:

And ô saith he, though I could have dispensed.

With this daies bloud, which I have sought to spare?

That greater glory might have recompensed by the forward worth of those that so much dare,

That we might honor had by th'ouerthrown (own. That th' wounds we make, might not have bin our.

1051

Calles on the fivord of wrath against my will,
And that themselves exact this cruelty,
And I constrained am this bloud to spill:
Then on my maisters, on couragiously in a fining A
True-harted subjects against traitors ill,
And sparenot them who seeke to spoile vs all,
Whose sowle consused and soone see you shall.

106

Straight moues with equal motion equal rage
The like incented armies into blood, and all none
One to defend, another fide to wage. The last back
Foule civil war, both vowes their quarrell good: 10
Ah too much heare to bloud doth now in rage back
Both who the deed promokes and who with flood,
That valor here is vice, here manhood fin,
The forward ft hands doth ô leaft honor win.

201

But

But now begin these sury-mouing soundes
The notes of wrath that musicke brought from hell,
The ratling drums which trumpets voice cosounds,
The cryes, the incouragements, the shouting shrell,
That all about the beaten ayre reboundes,
Thundring consused, murmurs horrible,
To rob all sence except the sence to fight,
Well handes may worke, the mind hath lost his light.

Owar!begotin pride and luxury, and all the Child of wrath and of differtion.

Horrible good; mischiese necessarie,

The sowle reformer of consultation,

Vniust-iust scourge of our iniquitie,

Cruell recurer of corruption:

O that these sin-sicke states in need should stand

To be let bloud with such a boystrous hand!

And a how well thou hadst bene spai'd this day
Had not wrong counsaild Percy bene peruers,
Whose yong vindanger'd hand now rash makes way of Wate.
Vpon the sharpest fronts of the most flerce:
Where now an equal fury thrusts to stay
And rebeat-backe that force and his disperse,
Then these assaile, then those chace backe againe,
Till staid with new-made hils of bodies slaine.

R 3. There

THE THIRD BOOKE.

IIO

There lo that new-appearing glorious starre Wonder of Armes, the terror of the field Young Henrie, laboring where the stoutest are, And even the stoutest forces backe to yell, And There is that hand boldned to bloud and warre and T That must the sword in woundrous actions weild! But better hadft thou learnd with others bloud To I A leffe expence to vs, to thee more good of mille W

Hadft thou not there lent present speedy ayd To thy indaungerde fathernerely tyrde, blid soll Whom fierce incountring Dowglas ouerlaid, and That day had there his troublous life expirde: Which was Heroycall Couragious Blunt araid wood flui-fluinV In habite like as was the king attirde to most lown? And deemd for him, excufd that fate with his,

For he had whathis Lord did hardly miffed solodo?

11201

For thought a king he would not now diffrace The person then supposed, but princelike shewes Glorious effects of worth that fit his place, or slent VI And fighting dyes, and dying ouefthrowesid nog V Another of that forward name and race won a roll W which was In that hotte worke his valiant life bestowes, or but A Who bare the standard of the king that day, had I Whose colours ouerthrowne did much dishaie. And Another Blunt she kings Standard bearer.

fir Walter

Blunt

And deare it coft, and ô much bloud is shed To purchase thee this loosing victory O trauay'd king:yet hast thou conquered A doubtfull day, a mightie enemy: But ô what woundes, what famous worth lyes dead! That makes the winner looke with forrowing eye, Magnanimous Stafford loft that much had wrought, Shorb. And valiant Shorly who great glory gote.

Such wracke of others bloud thou didft behold O furious Hot [pur, ere thou lost thine owne! Which now once lost that heate in thine waxt cold, And some became thy Armie ouerthrowne; And ô that this great spirit, this courage bold, Had in some good cause bene rightly showne! So had not we thus violently then

Haue termd that rage, which valor should have ben.

But now the king retires him to his peace, na-A peace much like a feeble fickemans fleepe, (Wherein his waking paines do neuer cease and I Though seeming rest his closed eyes doth keepe) For ô no peace could ever for cleafe von redio ad T His intricate turmoiles, and forrowes deepe, wo HA But that his cares kept waking all his life Continue on till death conclude the strife.

Whole

THE THIRD BOOKE HI

116

Whose harald sicknes, being sent before With full commission to denounce his end,
And paine, and griefe, enforcing more and nore,
Besiegd the hold that could not long defend.
And so consum'd all that imboldning store
Of hote gaine-striuing bloud that did contend,
Wearing the wall so thin that now the mind
Might well looke thorow, and his frailty find.

When lo, as if the vapours vanisht were,
Which heate of boyling bloud & health did breed,
(To cloude the sence that nothing might appeare
Vnto the thought, that which it was indeed)
The lightned soule began to see more cleere
How much it was abused, & notes with heed
The plaine discouered falsehood open laid
Of ill perswading stesh that so betraid.

1118

And lying on his last afflicted bed him stand,
Where death & conscience both before him stand,
Th'one holding out a booke wherein he red
In bloudie lines the deedes of his owne hand,
The other shewes alglasse, which sigured
An ougly forme of sowie corrupted sand:
Both bringing horror in the hyest degree
With what he was, and whathe straight should bee.
Which

Which feeing all confused trembling with feare He lay a while, as ouerthrowne in sprite, At last commaunds somethat attending were agy To jerch the crowne and fer it in his fight, med wolf On which with fixed eye and heavy cheere bad ba A Casting a looke, O God (faith he) what right I had to thee my foule doth now conceiue; Thee, which with bloud I gote, with horror leave. I

Wert thou the cause my climing care was such To passe those boundes, nature, and law ordaind? Is this that good which promifed so much memoral 1) And seemd so glorious ere it was attained lead on O Wherein was never loye but gaud a touch soo bnA To checke my soule to thinke, how thou wert gaind, And now how do I leaue thee vnto mine, as liabaA. Which it is dread to keepe, death to refigne was self

With this the foule rapt wholy with the thought Of fuch diffresse, did fo attentive weight and ya Her prefenthorror, whilft as if forgote of ochial oH The dill confirmed body fenceles lagrananis one V And now as breathles quite, quite dead is thought, When lo his some comes in, and takes awaid find? The fatall crowne from thence, and outhe goes and Without this care sollow with a grid gnilliwnv his

Nav

THE THIRD BOOKE!

122

And whilst that sad consused soule doth cast Those great accounts of terror and distresse, Vppon this counsell it doth light at last mo How the might make the charge of horrorle fe, oT And finding no way to acquit that's past But onely this, to vie some quicke redresse Ofacted wrong, with giuing ypagaine The crowne to whom it feem'd to appertaine.

Which found, lightned with some small ioy shee Rousesher servaunts that dead sleeping lay, (hyes, (The members of hir house,) to exercise One feeble dutie more during her flay: hmos) but And opening those darke windowes he espies The crowne for which he lookt was borne awaie, And all-agricu'd with the wakind offence worker He cauld him bring it backe that tooke it thence.

To whom (excusing his presumtoous deed By the supposing him departed quite) He said:ô Sonne what needes thee make such speed Vnto that care, where feare exceeds thy right, And where his sinne whom thou shalt now succeed Shall still upbraid thy inheritance of might, And if thou can't live, and live great from wo Without this carefull travaile, let it go, illiwing it & A MA

Nay

Nay father since your fortune did attaine
So hye a stand: I meane not to descend,
Replye the Prince; as if what you did gaine
I were of spirit vnable to desend:
Time will appeale them well that now complaine,
And ratesie our interest in the end;
What wrong hath not continuance quite outworne?
Yeares makes that right which neuer was so borne.

And ô do thou contend with all thy might ord mall Such euidence of vertuous deeds to bring, with all thy might ord mall That well may proue our wrong to be our right. That well may proue our wrong to be our right. That different may all advantage miffer the many all advantage miffer the many all advantage miffer the may all advantage miffer the many all advantage

And fince my death my purpose doth prevent
Touching this sacred warte I tooke in hand,

(An action wherewithall my soule had ment in the same of the s

THE THIRD BOOKS

66

128

Thou hast not that advantage by my raigne.
To riot it (as they whom long descent
Hath purchased love by custome) but with prynce.
Thou must contend to buy the worlds content.
What their birth gave them, thou hast yet to gaine.
By thine owne vertues, and good government, has And that vales thy worth confirme the thing.
Thou canst not be the father to a king.

Nor art thou born in those calme daics, where rest
Hath brought a sleepe sluggish securive; he do had.
But in tumultuous times, where mindes adress a day.
To factions are inured to mutinion or years low and I
A mischiese not by sorce to be suppress and he had be described and the same committed and the same same should be beguild with some new course and I
Where states are strong, & princes doubt their sorce
Where states are strong, & princes doubt their sorce

This and much more afflicion would baue faid
Out of the experience of a troublous raigne nichous
To which his high defires had dearly paide in an A)
Th'interest of an ener-toyling paide of the diagnost of the control of the control

In whose possession I must leave him now,
And now into the Ocean of new toyles,
Into the stormie Maine where tempests grow
Of greater ruines, and of greater spoiles
Set forth my course to hasten on my vow
O're all the troublous deepe of these turmoiles:
And if I may but live t'attaine the shore
Ofmy desired end, I wish no more.

132

Help on ô sou'raigne Muse, helpe on my course
If these my toyles be gratefull in thy eyes;
Or but looke on, to cheere my seeble force
That I faint not in this great enterprize:
And you ô worthy you, that take remorse
Of my estate, and helpe my thoughts to rise;
Continue still your grace that I may give
End to the worke, wherein your worth may live.

In whose possession I must leave him now,

And now into the Ocean of new to ples,

If to the state of aime where tempesses of gave her ruines, and of greater spoiles

Set south my course to hasten on my vow

O're all the troublous deepe of these unapiles

And it that her hue tempesses shore

O'my desired and, I wish no more.

SI

Help on a four aigne situs, helpe on my course is felocie my royles be gratefull in thy eyes;
Or bur leoke on, to cheere my leeble for ce.
That I faint not in this great enterprize:
And you a worthy you, that take remorfe.
Of my estate, and helpe my thoughts to rife;
Continue stilly our grace that I may give.
End to the worke, wherein your worth may live.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE FOUNTH BOOKE.

Henry the fifth cuts off his enemy

The earle of Cambridge that conspir dhis death:
Henry the sixt maryed unluckely
His and his countryes glory ruineth:
Suffolke that made the match preferd too hie.
Going to exile a pirat murthereth:
What meanes the Duke of Yorke observed to gaine
The worlds good will, seeking the crowne t attaine.

I

Choice smothered lay the low depressed fire,
Whose after-issuing slames confounded all
Whilst thou victorious Henry didst conspire
The wracke of Fraunce, that at thy scete did fall:
Whilst ioyes of gotten spoiles, and new desire
Of greater gaine to greater deedes did call (taine)
Thy conquering troupes, that could no thoughts reButthoughts of glorie all that working raigne.

What

THE FOUNTH BOOKE.

2

What do I feele ô now in passing by
These blessed times that I am forst to leave?
What trembling sad remorse doth terresse
M' amazed thought with what I do conceiue?
What?doth my pen commit impietie
To passe those sacred tropheis without leave?
And do I sin not to salute your ghostes
Great worthies, so renown'd in forraine coasts?

Who do I see out of the darke appeare,
Couered almost with clowdes as with the night,
That here presents him with a martiall cheere
Seeming of dreadfull, and yet louely sight?
Whose eye giues courage, & whose brow hath seare
Both representing terror and delight,
And staies my course, and off my purpose breakes,
And in obraiding wordes thus siersly speakes.

Vngratefull times that impiously neglect
That worth that neuer times againe shall shew,
Whatmerites all our toile no more respect?
Or else standes idlenes asham'd to know
Those wondrous Actions that do so object
Blame to the wanton, sin vnto the slow?
Can England see the best that shee can boast
Ly thus vngrac'd, vndeckt, and almost lost?
Why

Why do you feeke for fained Palladaus of O

Out of the fipoke of idle vanities and of W

That make glue glorie to the true diffigues and of O

Of Boarchier, Talkot, Newile, Willoughby? and board

Why should not you firme to fill vp your lines with W

With wonders of your owne, with verities wond O

T' inflame their offpring with the loue of Good W

And glorious true examples of their bloud. Id wolf

Whence new immortall fliads might proceed, had that those whose happie graces do abound in the Inblessed accents here maie have to feed. In the World Good thoughts, on no imaginary ground and O Of hungrie shadowes which no profit breed. Whence musicke like, instant delight may grow, But when men all do know they nothing know.

And why dost thou in lamentable verse. Nothing but bloudshed, treasons, sin and shame, we have worst of times, the extreame of its rehearse, To raise old staines, and to renew dead blame?

As if the minds of the evill, and perherse low mend?

Were not far some trained from the same.

By good example of faire vertuous acts,

Then by the shew of soule vingodly facts.

THE FOUNTH BOOKE.

00

8

O that our times had had some sacred wight,
Whose wordes as happie as our swordeshad bin
To have prepard for vs Trapheis aright
Of vndecaying frames thave rested in:
Triumphant Arkes of perdurable might
O holy lines: that such advauntage win
Vpon the Sieth of time in spight of yeares,
How blessed they that gaine what never weares.

What is it o to do, if what we do
Shall perish nere as some as it is donne?
What is that glorie we attaine ynto
With all our toile, if lost as some as wonne?
O small requitall for so great a doo
Is this poore present breath a smoake some gone;
Or these dombe stones erected for our sake,
Which formles heapes sew stormie chaunges make 10

Tell great Eliza fince her daies are grac'd With those bright ornaments to vs denide, That she repaire what darknes hath desac'd, And get our ruyn'd deedes reedifide:

Shee in whose all directing eye is plac'd A powre the highest powers of wit to guide, She may commaund the worke and ouersee The holy frame that might eternall bee.

A rauenous pray vpon her glorious raigne; on but A That do knes and the night should ouertake and the So cleare a brightnes, shining without stained and A Ah'no, she fosters some no doubt that wake and the For her eternity, with pleasing paines and the And if she for her selfe prepare this good.

O let her not negle a those of her bloud.

This that great Monarch Henry seemd to craue;
When (weighing what a holy motive here
Vertue proposed, and fit for him to have,
Whom all times ought of dutie hold most deare)
Isighd, and wished that some would take t'ingrave.
With curious hand so proud a worke to reare,
To grace the present, and to blesse times past,
That might for ever to our glorie last.

So should our well taught times have learn'd alike
How faire shind vertue, and how soule vice stood,
When now my selfe have driven to missike
Those deedes of worth I dare not yow for good;
I cannot more who lose, nor praise who seeke
By mightie Actions to advance their bloud;
I must saie who wrought most, least honor had,
How ever good the cause, the deedes were bad.

Who

T 2.

And

95

And onely tell the worst of energy aine

And not the intermedled good report,

I leave what glorye vertue did attaine

At th'everine morable Agincorte:

I leave to tell what wit, what powre did gaine

Th'assieged Roan, Caen, Dreux, or in what sort:

How maiestie with terror did advance

Her conquering soote on all subdued Fraunce.

All this I passe, and that magnanimous King
Mirror of vertue, miracle of worth,
Whose mightie Actions with wise managing
Forst prouder bosting climes to serue the North:
The best of all the best the earth can bring
Skarse equals him in what his raigne brought forth,
Being of a mind as forward to aspire
As fit to gouerne what he did desire.

Where vertue dwelt most faire as lodgdmost pure,
A bodie strong where vse of strength did get
A stronger state to do, and to endure:

Making his life the example to beget a compound of
Like spirit in those he did to good in vie, and any of
Most glorying to advance true vertuous bloud;

As is the greatnes sought but to do good.

Who as the chiefe, and all-directing head,
Did with his subjects as his members live,
And the n to goodnes forced not, but lead
Winning not much to have, but much to give:
Deeming the powre of his, his powre did spread
As borne to blesse the world & not to grieve:
Adornd with others spoiles not subjects store,
No king exacting lesse, none winning more.

An ill inur'd obedience for commaund,
And languishing luxuriousnes had spred
Feeble vnaptnes ouer all the land,
Yethe those long vnordred troupes so led
Vnder such formall discipline to stand,
That even his soule seemd only to direct
So great a bodie such exployts t'effect we award.

He bringes abrode distracted discontent,

Disperst ill humors into actions hie,

And to vnite them all in one consent

Plac'd the faire marke of glorie in their eye,

That malice had no leasure to dissent,

Nor enuie time to practise treachery,

The presentactions do diuert the thought

Of madnes past, while mindes were so well wrought.

T 3

Here

Here now were pride, oppression, vsury,
The canker-eating mischeifes of the state,
Cal'd forth to praie vppon the enemie,
Whilst the home-burthned better lightned sate:
Ease was not suffered with a gredie eye
T'examine states or private wealthes to rate,
The silent Courtes warr'd not with busic wordes,
Nor wrested law gaue the contentious swordes.

21

Now nothing entertaines th'attentiue eare

But stratagems, assaults, surprises, fights;

How to give lawes to them that conquered were,

How to articulate with yeelding wights:

The weake with mercie, and the proud with seare of

How to retaine; to give desarts their right,

Were now the Aers, and nothing else was thought

But how to win and maintaine what was gote:

221

And held alone imprisoned maiestie,

Proudly debarring entraunce from the rest

As if the praie were theirs by victorie:

Here no detractor woundes who merits best,

Nor shameles brow cheeres on impietie,

Vertue who all her toyle with zeale had spent

Nothere all vntewarded, sighing went,

But

Of powre, looking alike on like defarts,
Bleffing he good made others good thereby,
More mightie by the multitude of harts:
The field of glorie vnto all doth lie
Open alike, honor to all imparts;
So that the only fashion in request
Was to bee good or good-like, as the rest.

24

Somuch o thou example dost effect
Being far a better maister then commaund,
That how to do by doing dost direct
And teachest others action, by thy hand.
Who followes not the course that kings elect?
When Princes worke, who then will idle stand?
And when that dooing good is onely thought
Worthy reward; who will be bad for nought?

24

And had not th' earle of Cabridge with vaine speed
Vntimely practized for anothers right,
With hope t'aduaunce those of his proper seed,
(On whom yet rule seem'd destined to light)
The land had seene none of her owne to bleed
During this raigne, nor no aggireued sight:
None the least blacknes interclouded had
So faire a day, nor any eye lookt sad.

But

TAE POWETH BOOKE.

47

26

But now when Fraunce perceiving from a fard
The gathering tempest growing on from hence
Readie to fall, threatning their state to man e, in the
They labor all meanes to provide defence:
And practising how to prevent this warre, best and
And shut out such calamities from thence, the ago
Do softer here some discord lately growne to the ago
To hold Ambition busied with her owne.

Finding those humors which they saw were six.

Soone to be wrought and easie to be fed,

Swolne full with enuie that the crowne should six.

There where it did, as if established:

And whom it toucht in bloud to grieue at it,

They with such hopes and helps sollicited,

That this great Earle was drawne t'attempt the thing.

And practises how to depose the king.

And yet of mightier hopes then meanes to do,

And yet of pirit that did his hopes exceed,

And then of bloud as great to ad thereto:

All which, with what the gold of France could breed

Being powers inough a climing mind to wo,

He so imploid, that many he had wonne

Euen of the chiefe the king relide vppon.

The

South-

Torke.

The wel-known right of the Earle of March alurd A leaning loue, whose cause he did pretend; A but Whereby he knew that to himfelfe procurd its bal The Crowne for his owne children in the end: For the Earle being (as he was affurd) been rish to I Vnapt for issue, it must needes descend | de die ile 1 On those of his being next of Clarence race, won bal As who by course of right should hold the place. AV

It was the time when as the forward Prince Had all prepar'd for his great enterprize, draids all And readie stand his troupes to pare from hence hamicon. And all in stately forme and orderly estimate up o T When open fame gives out intelligence o doid wo T Of these bad comploss of his enemiestated situation Or elfe this time of purpose chosen is a mindiw yd T Though knowne before yet let run on till this world

That this might yeeld the more to aggravate Y Vpon to foule a deed to vilely fought, In il in his Now at this time fattemps to rivinate d brooks and So glorious great diffeignes fo forward brought: 02 Whilst carefull vertue seckes o'advaunce the state A And forher everlasting honor fought and daily That though the cause were right, and title strong The time of doing in yet makes it woods los and O And Elic

THE THIRD BOOKE

B

And straight an volumented death he had, and thraight were joyfully the Anchors weight A And all flocke fast abourd, with visage glad, As if the sacrifize had now beene payd and T For their good speed; that made their stay so sad to a Lothing the least occasion that delayd. (windes And now new thoughts, great hopes, calme seas, fair Whith present action intertaines their mindes.

But this that toucht thy now possessed hold;

But this that toucht thy now possessed hold;

Richard Norafter long, till this mans sonne assaies

Duke of To get of thine the right that he controwld:

Torke. For which contending long, his life he paies;

So that it fatall seemd the father should

Thy winning seeke to staie, and then his sonne should be the cause to loose, when thou hadst won.

Yet now in this to happie a meane while and I And interlightning times thy vertues wrought, I hat discord had no leasure to defile to the So faire attempts with a tumultuous thought: I so? And even thy selfe, thy selfe didst so beguite a flind? With such attention vppon what was sought, I have time affoordes not now with care or have the Others to seeke thee to secure thy states to smit and I had.

All the pretendant race thaue laid full low.

If thou proceeded hadft with crueltic,

Not suffering anie fatall branch to grow:

But vnsuspicious magnanimitie.

Shames such effects of feare, and force to show:

Busied in free, and open Actions still

Being great, for being good, hates to be ill.

Which ô how much it were to be requir'd

In all of might, if all were like of mind;

But when that all depraued have conspird

To be vniust, what saftie shall they find

(After the date of vertue is expire) buong nertwined

Bicher

That do not practize in the selfe-same kind,

And countermine against deceite with guile?

But ô what mischiese seeles the world the while?

137

And often for the state thought requisite,

As when the publicke good depends thereon,

When most injustice is esteemd most right:

But ô what good with doing ill is won?

Who hath of bloud made such a benefite

As hath not fear'd more after then before,

And made his peace the lesse, his plague the more?

V 2.

Far

THE FOWNTH BOOKE.

38

That cheerished the ofspring of his foes
And his competitors to grace did bring,
And them his frendes for Armes, and honors, cnoses
As if plaine courses were the safest thing
Where vpright goodnes, sure, and stedsast goes
Free from that subtile mask't impietie,
Which this deprayed world calles policie.

Yet how hath fate dispos'd of all this good?
What have these vertues after times availd?
In what steed hath hy-raised valor stood,
When this continuing cause of greatnes faild?
Then when proud-growne the irritated bloud
Enduring not it selfe it selfe assaild,
As though that Prowesse had but learnt to spill
Much bloud abrode to cut her throte with skill.

O doth th' Exernall in the course of thinges
So mixe the causes both of good and ill,
That thus the one effects of th' other bringes,
As what seemes made to blisse, is borne to spill?
What from the best of vertues glorie springes
That which the world with miserie doth fill?
Is th'end of happines but wretchednesse,
Hath sin his plague, and vertue no successe?

Either

Either that is not good, the world holds good,
Or else is so consuld with ill, that we Abused with th'appearing likelihood
Runto offend, whilst we thinke good to be:
Or else the heavens made man, in surious bloud
To torture man; And that no course is free

To torture man: And that no course is free
From mischiese long. And that faire daies do breed
But storms, to make more soule, times that succeed.

Who would have thought but so great victories,
Such conquests, riches, land, and kingdome gaind,
Could not but have establish't in such wise
This powreful state, in state to have remaind?
Who would have thought that mischief could devise
A way so soone to loose what was attaind?
As greatnes were but shewd to grieve not grace,
And to reduce vs into far worse case.

With what contagion France didst thou insect
The land by thee made proud, to disagree?
Tinrage them so their owne swords to direct
Vpon themselves that were made sharpe in thee?
Why didst thou teach them here at home t'erect
Tropbees of their bloud which of thine should be?
Or was the date of thy affliction out,
And so was ours by course to come about?

V 3

But

THE FO WRITH BOOKE,

But that vntimely death of this Great King,
Whose nine yeares raign so mighty woders wrought
To thee thy hopes, to vs despaire did bring
Not long to keepe, and gouerne what was gote:
For those that had th'affaires in managing
Although their countries good they greatly sought,
Yet so ill accidents vnsitly fell
That their desseignes could hardly prosper well.

An infant king doth in the state succeed.

Skarse one yeare old, lest vnto others guide,

Whose carefull trust, though such as shewd indeed.

They waighd their charge more then the world beAnd did with dutie, zeale and loue proceeds (side;

Yet for all what their trauaile could prouide

Could not woo fortune to remaine with vs.

When this her Minion was departed thus.

But by degrees first this, then that regaind When the turning tide beares backe with flowing chaunce Vnto the Dolphin all we had attaind, And fils the late low-running hopes of Fraunce, When Bedford who our onely hold maintaind WW Death takes from vs their fortune to aduaunce, And then home strife that on it selfe did fall Neglecting forraine care, did soone loose all.

And

47

Nere three score years are past since Bullinbrooke
Did first attaine (God knowes how inst) the crowne:
And now his race for right possessore
Were held of all, to hold nought but their owne:
When Richard Duke of Torke, begins to looke
Into their right, and makes his title knowne:
Wakening vp sleeping-wrong that lay as dead
To witnes how his race was injured.

His fathers end in him no scare could moue
T'attempt the like against the like of might,
Where long possession now of scare, and loue
Seem'd to prescribe even an innated right,
So that to prove his state was to disprove
Time, law, consent, oth, and allegeance quight:
And no way but the waie of bloud there was
Through which with all consusion he must passe.

Tindure a wrong with peace, then with such toyle
Tobtaine a bloudie right, since Right is sinne
That is ill sought, and purchased with spoile?
What madnes vnconstrained to begin
To right his state, to put the state in broyle?

Instice her selfe maie even do wrong in this,
No war being right but that which needfull is.

But

THE FOWERTH BOOKE.

And yer that oportunity which led to heard A

Him to attempt, seemes likewise him t'excuse: hid.

A seeble spirited king that gouerned and warm A

Vnworthy of the Scepter he did vse; his bladen We

His enemics that his worth maliced, head will mad We

Who both the land and him did much abuse; his did will

The peoples love, and his apparant right, him de We

May seeme sufficient motives to incite.

Besides the now ripe wrath (defend till now,) II

Of that sure and vnfailing Justicer, in the same in

Else might the impious fay with grudging spright,
Doth God permit the great to riot free, and built.
And blesse the mighty though they doe varight, of I
As if he did vato their wrongs agree by of live and I
And only plague the weake and wrerched wights IW
For smallest faults even in the highest degree 2010 I
When he but vsing them others to seourge, do that
Likewise of them at length the world doth purge. A
But

But could not ô for bloudshed satisfie
The now well-ruling of th'ill-gotten crowne?
Must euen the good receiue the penaltie
Of former sinnes that neuer were their owne?
And must a just kings bloud with miserie
Pay for a bad vniustly ouerthrowne?
Then ô I see due course must rightly goe
And th' earth must trace it or else purchase woe.

And fure this king that now the crowne possess

Henry the sixt was one, whose life was free

From that commaund of vice, whereto the rest

Of many mighty soueraignes subjectes be:

And numbred might have beene among the best

Of other men, if not of that degree:

A right good man, but yet an euill king

Vnfit for what he had in managing.

Mild, meeke of spirit, by nature patient:

No thought t' increase or scarse to keepe his owne:

Apter for pardoning then for punishment,

Seeking his bounty, not his powre t' haue knowne;

Far from reuenge, soone won, soone made content:

As fitter for a cloyster then a crowne:

Whose holy minde so much addicted is

On th' world to come, that he neglecteth this.

THE THIRD BOOKE

56

With such a weake, good, seeble, godly king
Hath Richard Duke of Yorke his cause to trie:
Who by th'experience of long managing
The warres of Fraunce with supreame dignitie;
And by his owne great worth with surthering
The common good against the enemie,
Had wrought that zeale and loue attend his might
And made his spirit equall vnto his right.

For now the Duke of Bedford beeing dead,
He is ordaind the Regent to succeed
In Fraunce for five yeares, where he travailed
Whith ready hand and with as carefull heed
To seeke to turne backe fortune that now fled,
And hold vp falling power, in time of need:
And gote, and lost and reattaines againe
That which againe was lost for all his paine.

His time expired, he should for five yeares more

The Duke Haue had his charge prolong'd, but Sommer set of Somerfit agreat
That still had enuide his commaund before,
the Duke
of Yorke & Which ads that matter to th' alreadic store bad ever
enuied bis
prefermet. Vnto the touch of that confounding stame (same.

As both their blouds could never quench the

And now the weaknes of that feeble head
That doth neglect all care, but his foules care,
So easie meanes of practise ministred
Vnto th'ambitious members to prepare
Their owne desires, to what their humors lead;
That all good Actions coldly followed are,
And seurall-tending hopes do wholy bend
To other now then to the publique end.

60

And to draw on more speedy misery,
The king vnto a fatall match is led
With Rayners daughter king of Sicilie,
Whom with vnlucky starres he married:
For by the meanes of this affinitie
Was lost all that his Father conquered,
Euen as if Fraunce had some Erynnis sent
T'auenge their wrongs done by the insolent.

This Rainer was
Duke of Anion & only inioid
the title of the K.of Sicilia.

61

This marriage was the Duke of Suffolks deed With great rewardes won to effect the same: Which made him that he tooke so little heed Vnto his countries good, or his owne shame: Being a match could stand vs in no steed For strength, for wealth, for reputation, same: But cunningly contriued for their gaine To cost vs more then Aniou, Mauns, and Maine.

Which were deliuered up to her father upon the match.

V.

And

THE THIRD BOOKE

62

And yet as if he had accomplished

Some mighty benefit vnto the land;

He gote his trauailes to be registred

In Parliment, for euermore to stand

A witnes to approue all what he did:

To th' end that if hereaster it were scand,

Autoritie might yet be on his side,

As doing nought but what was ratiside.

Imagining th' allowance of that place (naught, Would make that good the which he knew was And so would his negotiation grace As none would thinke it was his privat faut: Wherein though wit dealt wary in this case, Yet in the end it selfe it ouer raught, Striuing to hide he opened it the more, His after care shewd craft had gone before.

Deare didst thou buy ô king so faire a wise,
So rare a spirit, so high a minde the while:
Whose portion was destruction, dowry strife,
Whose bed was sorrow, whose imbracing spoile:
Whose maintenance cost thee, and thine their life,
And whose best comfort neuer was but toyle:
What Paris brought this booty of desire
To set our mighty Juum here on sire?

To blame her, that I yet must wonder at; bush and I Whore so sweet beauty, wit and worth were such. Whose so sweet beauty, wit and worth were such. What I would see a see a see so nerely touch by ad I That I am drawne to say I know not what, last worth And yet o that my pen should energine the out had Staine to that sex by whom her same doth line.

And had it not beene ours, no doubt the might had a mane matcht the worthieft that the world hath known And now fate faire with fame, with glorie bright:

But comming in the way where fin was grown world by the soule and thicke, it was her chance to light.

Amidst that grosse insection of those times, the soule and thicke, it was her chance to light.

And so came staind with blacke disgracefull crimes.

And some the world must have on whom to say
The heavie burthen of reproach, and blame,
Against whose deedes th' afflicted may invay
Asth' only Authors, whence destruction came:
When yet perhaps twas not in them to stay in the
The current of that streame, not helpe the same;
But living in the eie of Action so
Not hindring it, are thought to draw on wo.

X 3

So

That stand on other then their owne defence,
When as distruction is so neare at hand,
That if by weakenes, folly, negligence,
They do not comming miserie withstand
They shall be thought th'authors of the offence,
And to call in that which they kept not out, (bout.
And curst as those, that brought those plagues a-

And so remaine for ever registred
In that eternall booke of infamic:
When ô how many other causes lead
As well to that, as their iniquitie:
The worst complots oftly close smothered,
And well ment deedes fall out value kily:
Whilst the aggrieued stand not t'waighth'intent
But ever judge according to th'event.

Nor cleare their faults that mightie Actors are:
I cannot but affirme thy pride hath beene
A speciall meanes this commonwealth to marre:
And that thy wayward will was plainly seene
In vaine ambition to presume too sarre,

Duke of And that by thee the onely way was wrought

Glosser. The Duke of Glosser to his death was brought.

A

A man though seeming in thy thought to sit. A
Betweene the light of thy desires and thee, I have I
Yet did his taking thence plainly permit.
Others to looke to that they could not see it and I
During his life, nor would adventure it: It miles but A
When his remoue quite made that passage free; III
So by his fall thinking to stand alone. I would alone
Hardly could stand at all when he was gone.

For this Duke as Protector many yeares
Had rul'd the land, during the kings young age:
And now the felfe same charge and title beares
As if he still were in his pupillage:
With such disgrace vnto the Queene appeares
That all incentid with an ambitious rage
She doth conspire to have him made awaie,
As who the course of her maine will doth staie.

Thrust thereinto not onely with her pride

But by her fathers counsell and consent,

That grieu'd likewise that any else beside

Should have the honor of the government:

And therfore he such deepe aduse applied

As for raine crast and cunning could invent,

To circumvent an vnsuspecting wight

Before he should discerne of their despight.

Then

And

And had he not had such a greedy loue

Of still continuing of his charge too long,

Enuie had beene vnable to reproue

His acted life without shee did him wrong:

But having liu'd so manie yeeres aboue

He grieues now to descend to be lesse strong,

And kils that same that vertue did beget,

Chose to be held lesse good, then seene lesse great.

O could the mighty but give bounds to pride
And weigh backe for tune ere shee pull them downe,
Contented with inough, with honors satisfide,
Not striuing how to make so much their owne
As to leave nothing for the rest beside,
Who seeme by their high spreading overgrowne:
Whilst they themselves remaine in all mens sight
The odious marke of hatred and dispight.
Then

Then should not ô so many tragedies

Burthen our knowledge with their bloudy end,

Nor their disgrac'd confounded families

From so hye pride to so low shame descend:

Put planted on that ground where safety lies,

Their branches should to eternity extend:

But euer those that ouerlooke so much

Must ouersee themselues; their state is such.

Seuere he was, and strictly did observe

Due forme of sustice towardes every wight,

Vnmoucable, and never won to swerve

For any cause in what he thought was right:

Wherein although he did so well deserve,

In the licentious yet it bred despight;

So that even vertue seemes an Actor too

To ruine those fortune prepares to vndoo.

Those, thus provided whom the Queene welknew
Hated his might, and glad to innovate
Vnto so great, and strong a party grew
As easie t was to overthrow his state:
And onely hope of alteration drew
Manie to yeeld that had no cause to hate:
For even with goodnessmen grow discontent
Where states are ripe to fall, and vertue spent.

Y

And taking all the rule into her hand
(Vnder the shadowe of that seeble king)
The Duke sh' excludes from office and command,
And in the reach of enmity doth bring
From that respected height where he did stand,
Whilst malice scarce durst mutter any thing:
When straight the worst of him comes all reueald
Which former searc, or rigor kept conceald.

Now is he taxed that he rather fought
His private profit then the publique good,
And many things presumptuously had wrought
Other then with our lawes, and customes stood:
As one that would into the land have brought,
The civile forme in cases touching bloud, (sound,
And such poore crimes that shewd their spight was
But yet bewraide, their matter wanted ground.

That which is easie wrought in such a case,
Where what suborned Justice shall object
Is to the purpose, and must passe with grace:
And what the wretched bring of no effect
Whose hainous faults his matter must deface:
For where power hath decreed to find th' offence
The cause is better still then the defence.

A Parlament at Berry summoned

Dispatcht the deed more speedily then well,

For thither came the Duke without all dread

Or ought imagining of what befell:

Where as the matter is so followed

That he convented is ere he could tell

He was in danger or had done offence,

And presently to prison sent from thence.

84

Which quicke, and sodaine action gaue no time

For men to weigh the instice of the deed,

Whilst looking only on the vrged crime

Vnto the farther drift they take no heed:

For these occasions taken in the prime

Of courses new, that old dissikes succeed,

Leaue not behind that seeling touch of wrong,

Sacietie makes passions still lesse strong.

85

And yet they seem'd some mutiny to doubt
For thus proceeding with a man of might,
Seeing he was most popular and stout
And resolute would stand upon his right:
And therefore did they cast this way about
To have him closely murdred out of sight,
That so his trouble, and his death hereby
Might come togither and togither dye.

2

Reckning

THE FOWRTH BOOKE.

82

86

And must be wrought, at once to rid it cleere
And put it to the fortune of th'euent,
Then by long doing to be long in feare:
When in such courses of high punishment
The deed and the attempt like daunger beare;
And oft things done perhaps doe lesse anoy
Then may the doing handled with delay.

And so they had it straight accomplished,
For that day after his committing he
Is dead brought foorth being found so in his bed,
Which was by sodaine sicknes said to bee
That had vpon his sorrowes gathered,
As by apparant tokens men might see:
And thus ô Sicknes thou art oft belide,
When death hath many waies to come beside.

88

Are these the deedes hye fortaine wits inuent?

Is this that wisedome whereof they so boast?

Othen I would it neuer had beene spent

Here amongst vs, nor brought from out their coast!

O let their cunning in their limits pent

Remaine amongst themselues that like it most!

And let the Narth they count of colder bloud

Beheld more grosse, so it remains more good,

Let them have fairer citties, goodlier foiles,
And sweeter fields for beautie to the cie,
So long as they have these vngodly wiles,
Such detestable vile impietie:
And let vs want their vines, their fruites the whiles,
So that we want not faith and honestie,
We care not for those pleasures, so we may
Haue better harts, and stronger hands then they.

90

Neptune keepe out from thy imbraced Ile
This foule contagion of iniquitie;
Drowne all corruptions comming to defile
Our faire proceedings ordred formally;
Keepe vs mere English, let not craft beguile
Honor and Iustice with strang subtiltie:
Let vs not thinke, that that our good can frame,
Which ruinde hath the Authors of the same.

91

But by this impious meanes that worthy man
Is brought vnto this lamentable end,
And now that current with maine fury ran
(The stop remou'd that did the course defend)
Vnto the full of mischiese that began
T'a vniuersall ruine to extend,
That Istomus failing which the land did keepe
From the intire possession of the deepe.

And

THE FOUNTH BOOKE.

92

And now the king alone all open lay,

No vnderprop of bloud to stay him by,

None but himselfe standes weakely in the way

Twixt Yorke and the affected sou'raignty:

Gone is that barre that would have beene the stay

T' have kept him backe from mounting vp so hie.

But ô in what a state stand these men in

That cannot live without, nor with their kin?

The Queene hath yet by this her full desire
And now she with her minion Suffolke raignes,
Now shee hath all authority intire,
And all affaires vnto her selfe retaines:
And only Suffolke is advanced hyre,
He is the man rewarded for his paines:
He that did her insteed most chiefly stand,
And more advanced her, then he did the land.

Which when they saw who better did expect,
Then they beganne their error to descry,
And well perceive that only the desect
Was in their judgements, passion-drawne awry:
Found, formall rigour fitter to direct
Then pride and insolent inconstancie;
Better severity that's right and just
Then impotent affections led with lust.

And

And

95

And thereupon in forrow thus complaine:

O what great inconucnience do they feele.

Where as such imbecility doth raigne.

As so neglectes the care of common wealer will where ever one or other doth obtained is so mind?

So high a grace thus absolute to dealth:

The whilst th' aggrieued subject suffers still do we the pride of some predominating will.

And ever one remou'd, a worse succeedes;

So that the best that we can hope is warne, on nearly

Tumults and stirres, that this dissiking breedes;

The sword must mend, what insolence doth matre:

For what rebellions, and what bloudy decides well

Have ever sollowed where such courses are since at the word what ofter moves, what death of counsailers, what murder, what exile of officers a quanto and what has murder, what exile of officers a quanto and what has been sold with the same and what he would be a second sile of the same and what he was a second sile of the same

Witness the Spencers, Gaueston and Veress back.

The mighty minions of our seeblest kings; do all Who ever subjects to their subjects were, and an all And only the procurers of these things: also but When worthy Monarches that hold honor deare Maister themselves, and theirs; which ever brings. That vniversall reverence, and respects.

For who waighes him that doth himselfe neglects.

And yet our case is like to be farre worse.

Hauing a king though not so bent to ill,

Yet so neglecting good, that giving force.

By giving leave dothall good order kill:

Suffring a violent woman take her course.

To manage all according to her will,

Which how she doth begin, her deeds expresse,

And what will be the end, our selves may gesse.

Thus well they deem'd what after followed
When now the shamefull losse of Fraunce much
Which vnto Suffolke is attributed (grieues,
As who in all mens sight most hatefull lives:
He with the enemy confedered

Articles Betraies the state, and secret knowledge gives against de Of all our strength; that all which we did hold la Poole By his corruption is or lost or sold.

Suffolke.

Too

And as he deales abroad, so likewise here
He robs at home, the treasurie no lesse with the service of the servi

The

TOI

The Queene perceiuing in what case shee stood,
To loose her minion or ingage her state;
(After with long contention in her bloud
Loue and ambition did the cause debate)
Shee yeeldes to pride, and rather thought it good
To sacrifice her loue vnto their hate,
Then to aduenture else the losse of all
Which by maintaining him was like to fall.

102

She tries if that some short imprisonment would calme their heat; when that would not suffize, Then to exile him shee must needes consent:
Hoping that time would salue it in such wise.
As yet at length they might become content, And shee againe might have him home at last, When the sirst sury of this rage was past.

103

But as he to his judged exile went,

Hard on the thore he comes incountered

By some, that so far off his honor sent,

As put his backe-returne quite out of dread:

For there he had his rightfull punishment

Though wrongly done, and there he lost his head,

Part of his bloud hath Neptune, part the sand,

As who had mischiese wrought by sea and land.

Whose

THE FOWRTH BOOKES

104

Whose death when swift-wingd same at sull con-Vnto the trauaild Queen misdoubting nought, (uaid Despight and sorrow such affliction laid Vpon her soule as wondrous passions wrought: O God (saith she) and art thou thus betraid? And have my savours thy destruction brought? Is this their gaine whom highnes savoureth, Who chiese presend, stand as presend to death?

O fatall grace without which men complaine

And with it perish, what preuailes that we
Thus beare the title of a soueraigne,
And suffred not to be that which we be?

O must our subjects limit and constraine
Our fauors where as they themselves decree?

Must we our love at their appointment place?

Do we commaund, and they direct our grace?

106

And have we might, but must not vie our might?

Poore maiestie that other men must guide

Whose discontent can never looke aright:

For evermore we see those that abide

Gracious in ours, are odious in their sight, should?

Who would all-maistring maiesty defeat

Of her best grace, that is to make men great.

Deere

Decre Suffolke, ô I saw thy wofull cheere
When thou perceiu'dst no helpe but to depart:
I saw that looke wherein did plaine appeare
The lamentable message of thy heart:
That seemd to say: O Queene, and canst thou beare
My ruine so? the cause whereof thou art:
Canst thou indure to see them worke their will
And not defend me from the hand of ill?

108

Haue I for thee aduentured so much,
Made shipwracke of my honor, faith and same?
And doth my seruice give no deeper touch
To thy hard heart better to seele the same?
Or dost thou seare, or is thy weakenes such
As not of sorce to keepe me from this shame?
Or else now having seru'd thy turne of me,
Art well-content my overthrow to see?

109

As if my fight did read vnto thy minde
The lecture of that shame thou wouldst forget,
And therefore peraduenture glad to finde
So fit occasion dost it forward set:
Or else thy selse from dangerous toile t' vnwinde
Downe on my necke dost all the burthen let;
Since kings must have some hated worse then they,
On whom they may the waight of enuy lay.

THE FOWRTH BOOKE,

114

No Suffolke, none of this, my soule is cleere;
Without the thought of such impiety:
Yet must I needes confesse that too much seare
Made me desend thee lesse couragiously:
Seeing more Princes euer ruind were
By their immoderate sauoring prinately
Then by seueritie in generall,
For best h'is lik't, that is alike to all.

III

Thus in her passion lo shee vttered,
When as far greater tumults now burst out,
Which close and cunningly were practised
By such as sought great hopes to bring about:
For vp in armes in Kent were gathered
A mighty insolent rebellious rout
Vnder a daungerous head; who to deter
The state the more, himselfe nam'd Mortimer.

112

The Duke of Torke that did not idle stand
But seekes to worke on all advantages,
Had likewise in this course a secret hand,
And hartned on their chiefe accomplices,
To try how that the people of the land
Would (if occasion seru'd) b' in readines
To aide that line if one should come indeed
To move his right, and in due course proceed.

Know-

Knowing himselfe to be the onely one That must attempt the thing if any should, And therefore lets the Rebel now runne on and a A With that false name t'effect the best he could To make a way for him to worke vpon, That but on certaine ground aduenture would: For if the traitor fped, the gaine were his; in or ball. If not, yet he standes safe, and blameles is.

T'attempt with others dangers, nothis owne, He countes it wisedome if it could be wrought: And t' haue the honor of the people knowne Was now that which was chiefly to be fought: 1111 For with the best he knew himselfe was growne In that account, as made him take no thought Hauing obseru'd in those he ment to proue Their wit, their wealth, their cariage, and their loue.

With whom and with his owne alliances and I He first beginsto open in some wife The right he had, yet with such doubtfulnes, As rather forrow then his drift descries; ad or and I Complaining of his countries wretchednes In what a miserable case it lies, And how much it importes them to prouide For their defence against this womans pride.

Then

Then with the discontented he doth deale
In sounding theirs, not vettering his intent,
As being sure not so much to reueale
Whereby they might be made againe content:
But when they grieued for the common weale
He doth perswade them to be patient,
And to indure there was no other course,
Yet so perswades as makes their malice worse.

And then with such as with the time did run
He doth in most vpright opinion stand,
As one that never crost what they begun,

As one that never crost what they begun,
But seem'd to like what stil they tooke in hand:
Seeking all causes of offence to shun,
Praises the rule, and blames th' vnrulie land:
Workes so with giftes, and kindlie offices

That even of them he serves his turne no lesse.

118

Then as for those that were his followers
Being all choice men for vertues or desarts,
He so with grace, and benefits prefers,
That he becomes the monarch of their harts:
He drawes the learned for his Counsailers
And cherishes all men of rarest partes,
To whom good done doth an impression strike
Oficie and loue in all that are alike.

THE FOWRTH BOOKE.

119

And now by meanes of th' intermitted warre
Manie most valiant men impou'rished,
Onely by him sed and relieued are,
Onely respected, grac'd and honoured:
Which let him in, vnto their hearts so farre,
As they by him were wholy to be led:
He onely treades the sure and perfect path
To greatnes who loue and opinion hath.

120

And to have one some certaine province his
As the maine body that must worke the seate,
Yorkeshire he chose, the place wherein he is
By title, livings, and possessions great:
No country he preferres so much as this,
Here hath his bountie her abiding seat,
Here is his sustice and relieving hand
Ready to all that in destresse do stand.

121

What with his tenants, feruants, followers, friends,
And their alliances, and amities,
All that Shire vniuerfally attendes
His hand held vp to any enterprize:
And thus farre vertue with her power extendes,
The rest touching th' event in fortune lies.
With which accomplement so mighty growne
Forward he tendes with hope t' attaine a crowne.

The end of the fourth booke.